

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. GOVERNMENTAL ROSTER

OF THE

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

From the Organization of the State Government, together with a HISTORY OF THE GREAT SEAL OF STATE and a HISTORY OF THE SEAT OF STATE GOVERNMENT.

Compiled and Written by WINFIELD J. DAVIS, Member of the California Historical Society, and Historian of the Sacramento Society of California Pioneers, at the request of WM.
C. HENDRICKS, Secretary of State.

PRELIMINARY NOTE.

The official records of the early State administrations are extremely meager and confused, and but little data can be obtained from them. In this compilation, information which could not be obtained from official sources has been supplied from newspapers contemporaneously published, and it is believed that the dates and names are as accurate as it is possible to arrive at them.

The articles on the Great Seal of State and the Seat of State Government have heretofore been published in newspapers, but corrections and eliminations have been made for this publication. They have been compiled and written mainly from information derived from official sources.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following is a synopsis of the constitutional provisions and laws relating to the principal executive State offices, which have been in force since the organization of the State Government :

GOVERNOR.

Election and Term.—The original Constitution, adopted in 1849, provided that at the election at which it was to be submitted to the people—November thirteenth of that year—there should be elected a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, members of the Legislature, and two members of Congress. All the State officers, except members of the Legislature, were to take office on December fifteenth following, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and their term was fixed at two years. The first Legislature, on April 11, 1850, passed a law providing for the election of the next Governor at the general election to be held in 1851; and by an Act passed on March 23, 1850, the general elections were set for the first Monday in October of each year. On April 26, 1851, an amendatory Act was passed changing the time for holding the general State elections to the first Wednesday in September of each year. The amendments to the Constitution, adopted in 1862, provided for an extension of the term of office of the Governor to four years from the first Monday in December next after his election, and the general State elections were set for the first Wednesday in September in each alternate year, commencing with 1863. The new Constitution, adopted in 1879, provided for the election of the first Governor under it on the first Wednesday in September, 1879, for a term of three years from the first Monday after the first day of January, 1880; and that afterward general elections were to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1880, and each second year thereafter. The term of office of the Governor, commencing with the one elected in 1882, was fixed at four years from the first day of January following the election.

Salary.—The Constitution of 1849 fixed the salary of the Governor at $10,000 per annum, to so remain until changed by the Legislature. On May 1, 1851, the salary was fixed at $6,000; on May 11, 1852, at $10,000; on April 21, 1856, at $6,000; and on May 6, 1861, at $7,000. The Constitution of 1879 fixed the salary at $6,000, and it has not since been changed.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

Election and Term.—The Constitution and laws of the State have always provided for the election of a Lieutenant-Governor, at the same time as the Governor and for the same term. The Lieutenant-Governor has always been ex officio President of the Senate, and for a time in the history of the State acted also as Warden of the State Prison. In the event of a vacancy in the office of Governor it has always been provided that the Lieutenant-Governor should be promoted to that office, and the President pro tem. of the Senate should act as Lieutenant-Governor.

Salary.—The original Constitution fixed the compensation of the Lieutenant-Governor at $32 per day during the session of the Legislature, with mileage. By an Act passed May 1, 1851, the compensation was fixed at $15 per day and mileage; on April 21, 1856, at $12 per day and mileage; and on April 23, 1880, at $10 per day and mileage—these per diems to be paid only during the legislative sessions.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Election and Term.—Article V of the Constitution of 1849 provided that the Secretary of State should be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to hold office for two years. The constitutional amendments adopted in 1862 provided that the Secretary should be elected by the people at the same time that the Governor was chosen, for a term of four years from the first Monday in December after election. Under the present Constitution the Secretary is elected at the same time and for the same term as the Governor.

Salary.—On March 5, 1850, a law was passed fixing the salary of the Secretary of State at $7,000. On May 1, 1851, it was fixed at $3,500; and on May 6, 1861, at $4,000. Under the present Constitution the salary is $3,000.

TREASURER.

Election and Term.—The first Constitution provided that the Legislature should, in joint convention, at the first session, elect a Treasurer to hold office for the same term as the Governor; and that thereafter the office should be filled by election by the people. The first Legislature, by an Act passed April 11, 1850, provided for the election of a Treasurer at the general election in 1851 and each second year thereafter. The amendments of 1862 lengthened the term of the Treasurer to four years, from the first Monday in December next after the election, which was set at the same time as the election of Governor. Under the present Constitution the Treasurer is elected at the same time and for the same term as the Governor.

Salary.—The first Legislature, by an Act passed March 5, 1850, fixed the salary of the Treasurer at $9,000. On May 1, 1851, it was fixed at $5,000; on May 11, 1852, at $4,500; on April 21, 1856, at $3,500; and on May 6, 1861, at $4,000. Under the present Constitution the salary is $3,000.

CONTROLLER.

Election and Term.—The same provisions as regard the Treasurer.

Salary.—By an Act of March 5, 1850, the salary of the Controller was fixed at $8,000; May, 1, 1851, at $5,000; May 11, 1852, at $4,500; April 21, 1856, at $3,500; May 6, 1861, at $4,000; and under the new Constitution at $3,000.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Election and Term.—The same provisions as regard the Treasurer.

Salary.—The salary of the Attorney-General has been fixed as follows: By an Act of March 5, 1850, $7,000; May 1, 1851, $1,000; May 11, 1852, $2,000; May 6, 1861, $4,000; by the new Constitution, $3,000.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Election and Term.—The same provisions as regard the Treasurer.

Salary.—The salary of the Surveyor-General has been fixed as follows: By an Act of March 5, 1850, $7,500; May 1, 1851, $500; May 11, 1852, $2,000, and also $2,000 as Register of the State Land Office. Under the present Constitution the salary is $3,000.

CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Election and Term.—A law was passed February 14, 1850, establishing the office of Clerk of the Supreme Court and providing that the first incumbent should be elected by the Legislature, that the next Clerk should be elected by the people at the first county election, to be held on the first Monday in April, 1850, to hold office until January 1, 1851. On April 11, 1850, an amendatory law was passed providing for an election of a Clerk at the general election in October, 1850, and every two years thereafter, to take office on January first following each election. On April 28, 1851, a law was passed providing that the Clerk elected in October, 1850, should hold office until January 1, 1853, and that a Clerk should be elected at the general election in 1852, and every two years thereafter, to hold office commencing on the first day of January next after the election. On April 24, 1858, an Act was passed providing that a Clerk should be elected at the general election in 1859, and each second year thereafter, to hold office for two years from the first day of January after his election. On April 22, 1863, an Act was passed providing for the election of the Clerk at the same time as the Governor, and to hold for four years from the first Monday in December after his election. The present Constitution provides that the Legislature shall fix the time for the election of the Clerk, and the Political Code provides that that officer shall be elected at the same time as the Governor, and shall hold office for four years from the first Monday in December next succeeding the election.

Salary.—The salary of the Clerk was $4,000 until the adoption of the new Constitution, when it was reduced to $3,000.

STATE PRINTER.

Election and Term.—By an Act passed January 8, 1850, the office of State Printer was created, to be filled and controlled by the Legislature. The term was fixed at two years. The Act of April 11, 1850, provided that the Printer should be elected by the Legislature for the same term. On April 29, 1852, a law was passed abolishing the office of State Printer, and the Governor and Controller were authorized to let a contract to do the State printing for a period of nine months from May 1, 1852. On May 1, 1854, the office of State Printer was again created, and it was provided that it should be filled by an election by the then Legislature, and that at the general election in 1855, and every two years thereafter, that officer should be elected by the people. On April 22, 1863, provision was made for the election of the Printer by the people at the same time as the Governor, and for a term of four years from the first Monday in December after the election. On March 26, 1872, the office of Superintendent of State Printing was created, and that law took effect at the expiration of the term of the then State Printer. The appointment was to be made by the Governor on or before the first Monday in September, 1875, and no term of office was specified. That law is still in force.

Salary.—Originally the compensation of the State Printer was governed by the amount of work performed, but under the law creating the office of Superintendent the salary was fixed at $3,000. On March 30, 1874, it was reduced to $2,400, and on March 9, 1885, it was increased again to $3,000.

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

Election and Term.—The original Constitution directed the Legislature to provide for the election by the people of a Superintendent of Public Instruction, to hold office for three years. On April 11, 1850, an Act was passed providing for the election of the Superintendent at the general election in 1850, and every third year thereafter. By an Act passed May 1, 1851, it was provided that at the general election in 1853 the people should elect a Superintendent for the constitutional term, and that the Superintendent who had been elected in 1850, should hold to January 1, 1854, and thereafter the term should be three years from the first day of January next after the election. The constitutional amendments of 1862 provided that the Superintendent should be elected at a special election at which only judicial and school officers should be elected, and that the date of the election should be designated by the Legislature of 1863. The term of office was fixed at four years from the first day of December next after the election. On March 21, 1863, a law was passed providing that such special election should be held on the third Wednesday in October, 1863, and every second year thereafter. The present Constitution provides that the Superintendent shall be elected at the same time as the Governor, and shall take office on the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding the election.

Salary.—On May 11, 1852, the salary of the School Superintendent was fixed at $4,500, to be paid from the commencement of the term of office then existing. On April 25, 1856, it was fixed at $3,500, and on May 6, 1861, it was reduced to $3,000, and the salary has not since been changed.

CONTROLLERS.

JOHN S. HOUSTON, elected by the Legislature December 22, 1849, and took office the same day.

WINSLOW S. PIERCE, elected September 3, 1851; took office January 5, 1852. Died at Brooklyn, New York, July 29, 1888.

SAMUEL BELL, elected September 7, 1853; took office January 2, 1854.

GEORGE W. WHITMAN, elected September 5, 1855; took office January 7, 1856; on February 13, 1857, a resolution was passed by the Assembly impeaching Whitman for misdemeanor in office, and on the twenty-fourth, articles of impeachment were reported by a committee; the Senate on March ninth convened as a high Court of impeachment, and on April twenty-first Whitman was acquitted; Governor Johnson had, on February twenty-fifth, appointed Edward F. Burton Controller, and he performed the duties of the office until the acquittal of Whitman.

At the election held September 2, 1857, James W. Mandeville was elected Controller, but he did not qualify, having been appointed United States Surveyor-General for California a few days before the election; on January 21, 1858, Governor Weller nominated Samuel H. Brooks for the office, but the Senate refused to confirm, and on the twenty-seventh the Governor withdrew the nomination, explaining that it "had been made under a misapprehension of some material facts." On February fourth the Governor nominated Aaron R. Meloney for the office, and the Senate confirmed. Afterward, on April twenty-sixth, because some doubts had been expressed in regard to the regularity of the appointment, the Governor again nominated Meloney, and he was again confirmed. Whitman refused to surrender the office, claiming that he was entitled to hold until his successor should be elected and should qualify, and that as Mandeville had been elected, the Governor had no right to appoint. The matter was taken to the Supreme Court, and a final decision was rendered in Meloney's favor at the July term, 1858.

A. R. MELONEY, elected September 1, 1858, to serve out the unexpired term. He died at Lafayette, Contra Costa County, March 1, 1861.

SAMUEL H. BROOKS, elected September 7, 1859. Meloney refused to surrender the office, claiming that he was entitled to serve two years from his election. The Supreme Court decided in Brooks' favor at the January term, 1860. Brooks resigned November 20, 1861.

JAMES S. GILLEN, appointed by Governor Downey November 20, 1861, and took office that day.

G. R. WARREN, elected September 4, 1861; took office January 6, 1862.

GEORGE OULTON, elected September 2, 1863; took office December 5, 1863.

ROBERT WATT, elected September 4, 1867; took office December 7, 1867.

JAMES J. GREEN, elected September 6, 1871; took office December 2, 1871.

JAMES W. MANDEVILLE, elected September 1, 1875; took office December 4, 1875; died in office February 4, 1876.

WILLIAM B. C. BROWN, appointed by Governor Irwin, February 6, 1876, and took office the same day. At the next general election held on November 7, 1876, D. M. Kenfield and Brown were voted for to fill the vacancy, and Kenfield received a majority of about three thousand. Governor Irwin declined to issue a commission to him upon the ground that no proclamation had been issued calling for the election of a Controller. Kenfield applied for a writ of mandate to compel the issuance of the commission, but his petition was dismissed by the Supreme Court at the April term, 1877. Brown died at Sacramento April 12, 1882.

D. M. KENFIELD, elected September 3, 1879; took office January 5, 1880. He died at San Francisco, September 28, 1883.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT,

STATE SUPREME COURT.

The original Constitution of California, adopted in 1849, provided for a Supreme Court, to consist of a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices. It further provided, in Section 3 of Article VI:

The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected at the general election by the qualified electors of the State, and shall hold their office for a term of six years from the first day of January next after the election; provided, that the Legislature shall, at its first meeting, elect a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, by joint vote of both houses, and so classify them that one shall go out of office every two years. After the first election the senior Justice in commission shall be the Chief Justice.

The first Legislature, on February 14, 1850, passed an Act to organize the Court. In that Act it was provided that one Justice should be elected in 1851, one at each general election every second year thereafter, and that the Governor should fill vacancies by commission, which should expire at the subsequent general election, when the vacancy should be filled by an election for the remainder of the unexpired term. On the twenty-eighth an Act was passed authorizing the Clerk of the Supreme Court to rent a suitable room in San Francisco for the March term, 1850, provided that the rent of such room should not exceed $1,000 per month. On March fifth the Legislature fixed the salary of each Justice at $10,000 per annum. On April thirteenth an Act was passed providing for certain special terms in San Francisco, and that afterward the sessions of the Court should be held at the seat of the government.

In accordance with the provisions of the Constitution above quoted, the first Legislature, on December 22, 1849, elected S. C. Hastings Chief Justice, Henry A. Lyons first Associate Justice, and Nathaniel Bennett second Associate Justice. On February 1, 1850, the Legislature passed a resolution classifying the Justices so that Hastings should go out of office at the end of two years from January 1, 1850, Lyons at the end of four years, and Bennett at the end of six years from that date. On March 11, 1851, a law was passed to have one Justice elected in 1852, and one at the general election every second year thereafter; but on April twenty-eighth another Act was passed providing for the election of one in 1851, and one every second year thereafter. This Legislature also passed a law providing that the terms of Court until January 1, 1852, should be held in San Francisco, and after that at the seat of government. On May twenty-fourth an Act was passed providing that thereafter the sessions of the Court should be held at the capital of the State. The salaries of the Justices were reduced to $6,000 each on April 21, 1856.

Justice Hastings served out his term, and at the general election held September 3, 1851, Solomon Heydenfeldt was elected to succeed him. Heydenfeldt took office January 1, 1852, and resigned January 6, 1857. Governor Johnson, on the thirteenth, appointed Peter H. Burnett to fill the vacancy, and Burnett resigned October 12, 1857. On the thirteenth Governor Johnson appointed Stephen J. Field to serve out the unexpired term. Field had been elected on September 2, 1857, for the full term. This term began on January 1, 1858. In 1863 President Lincoln appointed Field one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, and on May twentieth of that year he resigned his seat on the California bench. The next day Governor Stanford appointed E. B. Crocker to fill the vacancy, and he served until the taking effect of the constitutional amendments of 1862.

Justice Lyons resigned March 31, 1852, and on April second Governor Bigler appointed Alexander Anderson to fill the vacancy, and he qualified on the sixth. At the general election on November 2, 1852, Alexander Wells was elected for this short term, and he took his seat on the bench January 3, 1853. Wells was reelected for the full term September 7, 1853, and he assumed office by virtue of that election January 4, 1854. He died October 31, 1854, and on November twenty-fourth Governor Bigler appointed Charles H. Bryan to fill the vacancy. At the general election held September 5, 1855, David S. Terry was elected by the people, and he assumed office on November fifteenth. Terry resigned September 12, 1859, to participate in the duel with Senator David C. Broderick. On the twentieth Governor Weller appointed W. W. Cope to fill the Terry vacancy. Cope had been elected for the full term at the election held on September 7, 1859, and he took office under that election on January second following, and served until the remodeling of the Court in 1864.

Justice Bennett resigned October 3, 1851, and on the eleventh Governor McDougal appointed Hugh C. Murray to fill the vacancy. On November 2, 1852, Murray was elected to succeed himself, and he took office by virtue of that election on January third following. Murray was elected for the full term on September 5, 1855, but he died September 18, 1857, and Governor Johnson appointed Peter H. Burnett on October twelfth to succeed him. At the general election on September 1, 1858, Joseph G. Baldwin was elected to fill the remainder of the vacancy, and he assumed the office on October 2, 1858. On September 4, 1861, Edward Norton was elected for the full term. Norton took office on January sixth following, and served until the change was effected by the adoption of the constitutional amendments of 1862.

In 1862 the State Constitution was amended to constitute the Supreme Court of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices, and it provided that the Justices should be elected at special elections to be provided for by law, at which elections only judicial and school officers should be elected. It provided further:

The first election for Justices of the Supreme Court shall be held in the year 1863. The Justices shall hold their offices for the term of ten years from the first day of January next after their election, except those elected at the first election, who, at their first meeting, shall so classify themselves by lot that one Justice shall go out of office every two years. The Justice having the shortest term to serve shall be Chief Justice.

On March 21, 1863, the Legislature passed an Act providing that there should be held on the third Wednesday in October, 1863, and every two years thereafter, an election to be called the "Special Judicial Election," at which should be elected the Supreme Justices, and other judicial and school officers. On April twentieth an Act was passed to provide for the organization of the new Court, and it was enacted that when a vacancy should occur the Governor should fill it by the appointment of a person who should hold until the next judicial election, and the Justice elected by the people at such election should hold office for the balance of the unexpired term. It was also provided that the terms of the Court should be held at the seat of government. The salaries of the Justices were fixed at $6,000 each. The salaries have not since been changed.

Under this constitutional provision, on October 21, 1863, Oscar L. Shafter, Lorenzo Sawyer, Silas W. Sanderson, John Curry, and A. L. Rhodes were elected Supreme Court Justices. The new Court organized January 2, 1864, and in accordance with law, the Judges drew lots to determine the tenure of their official terms, with the following result: Shafter drew for ten years, Rhodes for eight, Sawyer for six, Curry for four, and Sanderson for two.

Justice Sanderson was reelected to succeed himself on October 18, 1865. Sanderson resigned January 4, 1870. On the eighth Governor Haight appointed Jackson Temple to fill the vacancy, and he assumed the duties of the office on the tenth. On October 18, 1871, Addison C. Niles was elected Justice to fill the vacancy. He took the office January first, following, and remained on the bench until the new Constitution took effect.

Royal T. Sprague was elected to succeed Curry on October 16, 1867, and took office January 6, 1868, but died February 24, 1872, and on the fourth of March Governor Booth appointed Isaac S. Belcher to fill the vacancy. On October 15, 1873, Elisha W. McKinstry was elected to the office. McKinstry took office January 12, 1874, and served until the reorganization of the Court under the new Constitution.

On October 20, 1869, William T. Wallace was elected to succeed Sawyer. Wallace assumed office on January 10, 1870, and served until the new Constitution effected a change in the Court.

On October 18, 1871, Rhodes was elected to succeed himself, and he served until the new Court came in.

Justice Shafter resigned December 11, 1867, and Governor Haight appointed J. B. Crockett to succeed him. On October 20, 1869, Crockett was elected to succeed himself, and he served until the change was effected by the new Constitution.

In 1879 the people adopted the new Constitution, which constituted the Supreme Court of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, and it provided:

The Chief Justice and the Associate Justices shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at large, at the general State elections, at the times and places at which State officers are elected, and the term of office shall be twelve years from and after the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election; provided, that the six Associate Justices elected at the first election shall, at their first meeting, so classify themselves, by lot, that two of them shall go out of office at the end of four years, two of them at the end of eight years, and two of them at the end of twelve years, and an entry of such classification shall be made in the minutes of the Court in bank, signed by them, and a duplicate thereof shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. If a vacancy occur in the office of a Justice, the Governor shall appoint a person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a Justice to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election, and the Justice so elected shall hold the office for the remainder of the unexpired term. The first election of the Justices shall be at the first general election after the adoption and ratification of this Constitution.

At the election held on September 3, 1879, Robert F. Morrison was elected Chief Justice. At the same time Samuel Bell McKee, Erskine M. Ross, John R. Sharpstein, J. D. Thornton, E. W. McKinstry, and M. H. Myrick were elected Associate Justices. The new Court organized January 5, 1880, and on the classification, by lot, Ross and Sharpstein drew for four years, McKee and Myrick for eight years, and Thornton and McKinstry for twelve years.

On November 7, 1882, Sharpstein and Ross were elected to succeed themselves. They assumed office, by virtue of this election, January 1, 1883, as by the provisions of section ten of the schedule to the new Constitution, the terms of all officers elected at the first election under it were made one year shorter than the terms as fixed by law or by the Constitution.

Ross sent his resignation to the Governor on October 1, 1886, and at the election on November second, following, Jackson Temple was chosen to succeed him.

At the same election A. Van R. Paterson and Thomas B. McFarland were elected Associate Justices to succeed McKee and Myrick.

Judge McKinstry resigned July 30, 1888, to take effect October 1, 1888, and on September twenty-second, of that year, Governor Waterman appointed John D. Works to fill the vacancy, and at the election held on November 6, 1888, Works was chosen to succeed himself.

REPRESENTATIVES TO CONGRESS.

The original State Constitution, adopted in 1849, provided that at the election to be held on November thirteenth of that year, there should be elected two members of Congress, and the first Legislature passed a law providing for the election of their successors at the general election in 1851. On April 24, 1852, a law was passed directing that Congressmen should be elected at the general election in 1852, and each second year thereafter. On April 15, 1858, an Act was passed providing that the Representatives should be chosen at the general election in 1859, and each second year thereafter. A law was passed on April 1, 1864, dividing the State into three Congressional Districts, and providing for the election of Representatives at the general election in 1864, and every two years thereafter. On March 13, 1866, an Act was passed fixing the time for the election of Congressmen at the general election in 1867, and every two years thereafter. A law was passed on March 11, 1868, fixing the time for the election of Representatives at the general election in 1868, and every two years thereafter. On April 4, 1870, an Act was passed providing for the election of Congressmen at the general election in 1871, and every two years thereafter. March 30, 1872, a law was passed dividing the State into four Congressional Districts, and providing that the members should be chosen at the general election in 1872, and every two years thereafter. The Political Code, as originally adopted, provided for the election of Congressmen at the general election in 1873, and every two years thereafter. The provision of the Code was superseded by the Act of March 30, 1872, which was subsequently passed by the same Legislature. On March 13, 1883, a law was passed to divide the State into six Congressional Districts. Since 1872 the time for the election of members of Congress has been fixed by Federal law.

The following is a list of the Representatives to Congress, since the organization of the State government:

Elected November 13, 1849: GEORGE W. WRIGHT and EDWARD GILBERT.

Elected September 3, 1851; term commenced March 4, 1851: J. W. McCORKLE and E. C. MARSHALL.

Elected November 2, 1852; term commenced March 4, 1853: JAMES A. McDUGALL and MILTON S. LATHAM.

Elected November 5, 1872; term commenced March 4, 1873: CHARLES CLAYTON, HORACE F. PAGE, JOHN K. LUTTRELL, and S. O. HOUGHTON.

Elected September 1, 1875; term commenced March 1, 1875: W. A. PIPER, HORACE F. PAGE, JOHN K. LUTTRELL, and P. D. WIGGINTON.

Elected November 7, 1876; term commenced March 4, 1877: HORACE DAVIS, HORACE F. PAGE, JOHN K. LUTTRELL, and ROMUALDO PACHECO. The Secretary of State refused to issue a certificate of election to Pacheco, there being but one vote majority for him, and his opponent, P. D. Wigginton, having taken steps to contest the election. At the January term, 1877, the State Supreme Court directed that a peremptory writ of mandate issue to the Secretary commanding him to canvass the vote as it had been transmitted to his office by the County Clerks, and to issue a certificate to the person thus shown to have received the highest number of votes. In accordance with this decision the certificate of election was issued to Pacheco, and he proceeded to Washington and there took the oath of office on December 3, 1877. Wigginton contested the seat, and the House sustained his contest. Wigginton took the oath of office on February 7, 1878, and served out the remainder of the term.

Elected September 3, 1879; term commenced March 4, 1879: HORACE DAVIS, HORACE F. PAGE, CAMPBELL P. BERRY, and ROMUALDO PACHECO.

Elected November 2, 1880; term commenced March 4, 1881: WILLIAM S. ROSECRANS, HORACE F. PAGE, CAMPBELL P. BERRY and ROMUALDO PACHECO.

Elected November 7, 1882; term commenced March 4, 1883: WILLIAM S. ROSECRANS, JAMES H. BUDD, BARCLAY HENLEY, P. B. TULLY, JOHN R. GLASCOCK and CHARLES A. SUMNER.

Elected November 4, 1884; term commenced March 4, 1885: BARCLAY HENLEY, JAMES A. LOUITT, JOSEPH McKENNA, WILLIAM W. MORROW, CHARLES N. FELTON, and H. H. MARKHAM.

Elected November 2, 1886; term commenced March 4, 1887: THOMAS L. THOMPSON, MARION BIGGS, JOSEPH McKENNA, WILLIAM W. MORROW, CHARLES N. FELTON, and WILLIAM VANDEVER.

Elected November 6, 1888; term to commence March 4, 1889: J. J. DE HAVEN, MARION BIGGS, JOSEPH McKENNA, W. W. MORROW, THOMAS J. CLUNIE, and WILLIAM VANDEVER.

FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

The first official act looking to the establishment of a State government for California, was the issuance of a proclamation on June 3, 1849, by Brigadier-General Bennett Riley, U. S. A., the then Military Governor of the Territory, "recommending the formation of a State Constitution or a plan of a Territorial Government." The Convention was made to consist of thirty-seven Delegates, to be chosen as follows: District of San Diego, two Delegates; of Los Angeles, four; of Santa Barbara, two; of San Luis Obispo, two; of Monterey, five; of San José, five; of San Francisco, five; of Sonoma, four; of Sacramento, four; and of San Joaquin, four. The districts named were limited as follows:

San Diego bounded on the south by Lower California, on the west by the sea, on the north by the parallel of latitude including the Mission San Juan Capistrano, and on the east by the Colorado River.

Los Angeles bounded on the south by the District of San Diego, on the west by the sea, on the north by the Santa Clara River and a parallel of latitude running from the head waters of that river to the Colorado.

Santa Barbara bounded on the south by the District of Los Angeles, on the west by the sea, on the north by Santa Inez River and a parallel of latitude existing from the headwaters of that river to the summit of the Coast Range of mountains.

San Luis Obispo bounded on the south by the District of Santa Barbara, on the west by the sea, on the north by a parallel of latitude including San Miguel, and on the east by the Coast Range of mountains.

Monterey bounded on the south by the District of San Luis, and on the north and east by a line running east from New Year's Point to the summit of the Santa Clara range of mountains, thence along the summit of that range to the Arroyo de los Leagas, and a parallel of latitude extending to the summit of the Coast Range, and along that range to the District of San Luis.

San José bounded on the north by the Straits of Carquinez, the Bay of San Francisco, the Arroyo of San Francisquito, and a parallel of latitude to the summit of Santa Clara Mountains, on the west and south by the Santa Clara Mountains and the District of Monterey, and on the east by the Coast Range.

San Francisco bounded on the west by the sea, on the south by the Districts of San José and Monterey, and on the east and north by the Bay of San Francisco, including the islands in that bay.

Sonoma included all the country bounded by the sea, the Bays of San Francisco and Suisun, the Sacramento River, and Oregon.

Sacramento bounded on the north and west by the Sacramento River, on the east by the Sierra Nevada, and on the south by the Cosumnes River.

San Joaquin included all the country south of the Sacramento District, and lying between the Coast Range and the Sierra Nevada.

The election for delegates was held on August 1, 1849. The Convention met in Colton Hall, in the Town of Monterey, at twelve m. on Saturday, September 1, 1849, and adjourned on Saturday, October 13, 1849. The Convention admitted to seats quite a number of delegates in excess of those contemplated in the proclamation of General Riley. On organization the following were chosen officers of the body: President, Robert Semple; Secretary, William G. Marcy; Assistant Secretaries, Caleb Lyon and J. G. Field; Reporter, J. Ross Browne; Sergeant-at-Arms, J. S. Houston; Doorkeeper, Cornelius Sullivan; Interpreter and Translator, W. E. P. Hartnell; Clerk to Interpreter and Translator, W. H. Henrie. The Constitution framed by the Convention was adopted by the people at an election held November 13, 1849.

SECOND CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

On March 30, 1878, an Act was approved to provide for a convention to frame a new Constitution for the State of California. The Act provided for an election to be held on the third Wednesday in June (19th), 1878, for delegates to the convention, and that the number of delegates should be one hundred and fifty-two—one from each Senatorial District, one from each Assembly District, and eight from each of the four Congressional Districts. The convention met in the State Capitol, at Sacramento, on Saturday, September 28, 1878, and adjourned on Monday, March 3, 1879. The new Constitution was ratified by a vote of the people on Wednesday, May 7, 1879. The officers of the Convention were: Joseph P. Hoge, President; Isaac S. Belcher, President pro tem.; Joseph A. Johnson, Secretary; Edwin F. Smith, Secretary after January 17, 1879; George A. Thornton and Edwin F. Smith, Assistant Secretaries; J. M. Wright, Assistant Secretary after January 24, 1879; E. L. Crawford, Minute Clerk; George E. McStay, Journal Clerk; T. J. Sherwood, Sergeant-at-Arms; Benj. Chambers, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms. The following is a list of the delegates to the two Constitutional Conventions:

HISTORY OF THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

At the time when the question of designing the great seal for the new State was being agitated in the Constitutional Convention, which met in Monterey in 1849, there happened to be sojourning temporarily in that little town an accomplished and cultivated officer of the United States Army, Major Robert Selden Garnett. He was a gentleman of modest demeanor, and excelled in the use of his pencil. One evening he sketched a design for a seal of the State, and it was exhibited to various members of the Convention. One of the delegates asked leave to present it to the body, but the quiet Major declined upon the ground that he believed that a knowledge of the source from whence it had come would prevent its adoption. There existed at that time quite a hostility between the military authorities and the nascent civil powers, and there was an especial distrust of the secret mission of Thomas Butler King, with which Garnett was understood to be connected. Caleb Lyon, one of the clerks of the Convention, learned of the design, and readily obtained the consent of Garnett to appropriate it and present it as his own production. As the design came from the hands of its author, it was chaste and beautiful, and somewhat different from the present seal. It represented the figure of Minerva, with the Golden Gate, and a ship in full sail in the foreground; and the Sierra Nevada range in the background, with the word "Eureka" above. The design was referred to a committee, and on September 29, 1849, the report of the committee was considered by the Convention. W. E. Shannon deemed the design a most happy one, but more appropriate for a coat of arms than for a seal. He said that it was unusual for a State seal to contain a motto, and that it ordinarily comprehended the main emblems, and the words "Great Seal of the State." An explanation accompanying the design was entered in the Journal, as follows:

"Around the bend of the ring are represented thirty-one stars, being the number of States of which the Union will consist upon the admission of California. The foreground figure represents the Goddess Minerva, having sprung full grown from the brain of Jupiter. She is introduced as a type of the political birth of the State of California, without having gone through the probation of a Territory. At her feet crouches a grizzly bear, feeding upon the clusters from a grapevine, emblematic of the peculiar characteristics of the country. A miner is engaged with his rocker and bowl at his side, illustrating the golden wealth of the Sacramento, upon whose waters are seen shipping, typical of commercial greatness; and the snow-clad peaks of the Sierra Nevada make up the background, while above is the Greek motto "Eureka" (I have found), applying either to the principle involved in the admission of the State, or the success of the miner at work."

After various amendments had been suggested, the matter was laid on the table. On October the second the report of the committee was again considered. Rodman M. Price submitted a resolution that the design for the seal reported by the committee be accepted. O. M. Wozencraft submitted the following, which was rejected: "That the seal be amended by striking out the figures of the gold-digger and the bear, and introducing instead bags of gold and bales of merchandise." M. G. Vallejo submitted an amendment that the bear be taken out of the design; or, if it do remain, that it be represented as made fast by a lasso in the hands of a vaquero.

After a debate, the amendment proposed by Vallejo was rejected by a vote of sixteen to twenty-one. Price's resolution was then adopted. W. S. Sherwood moved that the seal be the "coat of arms" of the State of California, and the motion was then carried by a vote of twenty-one to sixteen. Price then submitted a resolution that Lyon be authorized to superintend the engraving of the seal; that he furnish the same, in the shortest possible time, to the Secretary of the Convention, with a press and all necessary appendages, and that the sum of $1,000 be advanced to him in full compensation for the design and seal. This resolution was not considered until the eleventh, when a substitute was adopted, authorizing Lyon to superintend the engraving and to furnish the seal as soon as possible to the Secretary of the Convention, to be delivered to the Secretary of State under the Constitution; and the sum of $1,000 was to be paid, in full compensation for the design, seal, press, and all appendages. It was also resolved that the words "The Great Seal of the State of California" be added to the design. Henry W. Halleck inquired if any gentleman present knew what had become of the original design, and that the gentleman by whom it was designed (Major Garnett) requested that it should be found if possible and handed to the gentleman who occupied the chair. Mr. Sherwood said that he believed the seal was not the entire production of the gentleman who had been authorized to have it engraved, and that Lyon did not claim it as such. He said that the original design had been given to Lyon by a gentleman who did not wish his name to be made public, but expressed a desire, in a confidential letter to Lyon, that he (Lyon) might be known as the author.

The bear was added chiefly to gratify Major J. R. Snyder and the men of the Bear Flag Revolution. Then was added the figure of a man with an uplifted pick-ax, as an emblem of the great mining interests of the country.

It seems that Lyon either did not get the $1,000 voted him by the Convention, or that he wanted to be paid again. The following article was published in the "Alta California" of February 19, 1850, and presumably written by Edward Gilbert, the editor, a member of the Constitutional Convention, and one of our first Congressmen:

We observe that a petition has been made to the Legislature, on behalf of Caleb Lyon, for $1,000 for the State Seal, "designed and executed by him." It may as well be understood at once that if any credit belongs to any person for the design of the seal, it is not to Caleb Lyon, of Lyonsdale. The original design for the seal was made by an officer of the army, sojourning temporarily at Monterey during the time the Convention was in session. When the subject of a seal was mooted, this design was shown to various members of the Convention, who suggested some amendations and the insertion of other matters. These were drawn in by the original designer, who did not wish it to be known who was the author, and the seal was presented by Mr. Lyon. After a pretty hard fight it was adopted, and $1,000 appropriated to Mr. Lyon to procure a die and proper press. This duty he performed after a fashion. The design was marred in the engraving; the die was not sunk near deep enough, and the press was not sufficiently powerful for the purpose. The commissions of the Congressional delegation were without the slightest impress of the seal before they left the country. If we are not very much mistaken, Mr. Lyon, of Lyonsdale, received his money out of the Civil Fund, and is now conveying it to the sylvan retreats of Lyonsdale. But this has nothing to do with the paternity of the seal. All we wish to state, and that most distinctly, is that Mr. Lyon has no right or title to the honor of either designing or executing the seal any more than the Khan of Tartary.

In October, 1855, a peculiar complication occurred between Governor Bigler and the Secretary of State, James W. Denver. Under the Constitution, as it then stood, the Secretary of State was the appointee of the Governor. Denver had been appointed by Bigler on February 19, 1853. Afterward a difference arose between the Governor and Secretary of State. Denver had been elected to Congress in 1854, and on October 5, 1855, Bigler addressed a letter to Denver demanding the great seal of State, and said that he desired to keep it in his own office, where he claimed the Constitution contemplated that it should be kept. On the same day Denver replied, declining to permit the seal to pass out of his possession, and immediately departed for Washington to attend to his Congressional duties, leaving his deputy in charge of the Secretary's office. He also left a resignation to take effect November fifth. On the sixth of October the Governor again visited the office of the Secretary, demanded the seal of the deputy, and was again refused its possession. He then handed to the deputy the commission of Charles H. Hempstead as Secretary of State, and directed the deputy to affix to it the seal, but the deputy refused to do so on the ground that it was a constitutional office and could not be vacated except by death, resignation, or impeachment. The deputy of Denver held possession of the office for a month, during which time his acts were not recognized as valid by the Governor, and it is said that the latter caused a duplicate great seal to be made, with which his official acts were attested by his newly appointed Secretary. Years afterward it was stated that forged patents for State lands were in circulation, and that one of those old seals had been stolen and used for attesting them. However this may be, there are two dies of the State seal in the possession of the Secretary of State at this time.

In 1858 the State seal was damaged so that it failed to give a true impression, and a bill was introduced in the Senate by Mr. Thom to authorize the Secretary of State to procure a new seal, to be engraved on steel and to be substituted for and used instead of the seal then in existence; and requiring him to destroy the then State seal in the presence of the Governor and Controller. The bill was accompanied with a design which reduced the size of the seal a twelfth part of an inch, and to admit of this contraction some of the details of the original design were omitted. The bear was made to crouch submissively at the feet of Minerva, the miner's cradle was left out, and the miner was brought nearer the water. On March 10, 1858, the Senate amended the bill by providing that the design and size should be the same as in the then seal ; and on April sixteenth another amendment was adopted that "the design of the present seal shall be preserved intact in the new one, but the size thereof shall be reduced six tenths of an inch, so that the new seal when completed shall be three and three tenths of an inch in diameter." The bill with this amendment passed the Senate on the thirty-first, but it was not considered in the House.

Garnett, the designer of the original seal, was born in Virginia about 1821 ; entered West Point in 1837 ; graduated twenty-seventh in his class, July 1, 1841, and appointed Brevet Second Lieutenant of artillery ; was assistant instructor of infantry tactics at the military academy from July, 1843, to October, 1844 ; was Aid-de-Camp to General Wool in 1845, and distinguished himself in the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma ; was promoted to a First Lieutenancy August 18, 1846 ; was Aid-de-Camp to General Taylor during the Mexican War and until 1849 ; breveted Captain and Major for gallant and meritorious conduct at Monterey and Buena Vista ; transferred to the infantry in 1848 ; promoted to a Captaincy in 1851 ; from 1852 to 1854 was commandant of the corps of cadets and instructor of infantry tactics at West Point ; appointed Captain of the First Regiment Cavalry in 1855, and Major of the Ninth Infantry in the same month ; was commander in the operations against the Indians on Puget Sound in 1856, and commanded the Yakima expedition in 1858. At the breaking out of the rebellion he took the side of the Confederates, was promoted to a Brigadier-Generalship and assigned to the Department of West Virginia. Here General McClellan attacked him, and after several days of alternate fighting and retreating, at the battle of Carrick's Ford, on July 15, 1861, Garnett was killed and his forces routed. His body was carefully cared for by the Federal commander, and after being embalmed was forwarded to his friends.

Caleb Lyon was appointed Consul to Shanghai, China, by President Polk in 1845. On his return to New York he served in both branches of the Legislature, and in 1853 was elected from that State to Congress. In 1864 he was appointed Governor of Idaho Territory, and retained the office three years. He died at Rossville, New York, on September 9, 1875. Of the members of the convention whose names figure in this article, W. E. Shannon died of cholera at Sacramento on November 3, 1850, at the age of twenty-eight. Rodman M. Price was afterward elected Governor of New Jersey, and is now living in the east. Vallejo is still living in this State, and takes an active part in public matters. Winfield S. Sherwood was afterward a District Judge, and died in Sierra County on June 25, 1870. Snyder held many important public positions, removed to Sonoma County, conducted an extensive vineyard, and died there April 29, 1878. Halleck was at that time the Secretary of State under the military government. He afterward practiced law in San Francisco, and in July, 1862, was appointed General-in-Chief of all the armies of the United States. He held that position until March 12, 1864, when General Grant was made Lieutenant-General. He died in Louisville, Kentucky, January 9, 1872.

HISTORY OF THE SEAT OF STATE GOVERNMENT.

The first Constitutional Convention of California met in Colton Hall, Monterey, September 1, 1849, and on the twenty-sixth the question of the location of the seat of State Government came up upon the consideration of the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Provisions of the Constitution. That committee reported the following as the first section of Article XI:

The first session of the Legislature shall be held in the Pueblo de San José, which place shall be the permanent seat of government until removed by law; provided, however, that two thirds of all the members elected to each house of the Legislature shall concur in the passage of such a law.

Henry W. Halleck, then Secretary of State under General Riley, the military Governor, and a member of the convention from Monterey, offered the following as a substitute:

The first session of the Legislature under this Constitution shall be held at Monterey, and the subsequent sessions at the permanent seat of government, which shall be the Pueblo de San José, unless otherwise directed by a majority of all the members elected to each house of the Legislature.

In the lengthy debate which followed, the delegates from Monterey represented that the amendment was offered merely as a compromise; that they were willing that the seat of government should be changed to San José after the adjournment of the first Legislature; that if the first Legislature should meet at San José in the following December, as had been proposed, it would be difficult for the people of that town to provide proper accommodations; that they were authorized by the people of Monterey to tender Colton Hall and other suitable buildings to the State for the use of the Legislature and the other State officers; that the Capital should not be removed from Monterey without some notice, as that place had been, with the exception of a few years, the seat of government of the country since seventeen hundred and eighty-one; that it was true that the accommodations in Monterey, from circumstances entirely beyond the control of the inhabitants, for the members of the convention, had been very scanty, but that difficulty would be remedied before the meeting of the first Legislature; that the government records were then at Monterey, and that they could not be legally removed until after the new government had gone into operation and had changed the location of the capital, so that, therefore, if the first Legislature should meet at San José its session would be held at quite a distance from the place where the official records would be kept; that the question of the removal of the capital had been sprung on the people of Monterey, and that the people of San José had unexpectedly presented to the Convention maps showing the advantages of their town, and that Monterey was the center of the population of the State, and was more accessible generally than San José. The delegates from San José argued that that place was the geographical center of the State; that because Monterey had been the seat of Government for years was no reason why the removal should not be had; that they had been authorized by the local authorities of San José to tender to the State for the use of the Legislature a furnished building, free of expense. They presented a plan of their town, and stated that the local authorities, by a resolution passed on the eighth, had unanimously resolved to permanently donate to the State a square of thirty-two acres, and valued at $60,000, provided the Capital should be moved to that place at the first session of the Legislature; that until the Capitol was built they would tender gratuitously for the use of the Legislature a building, which was then being erected, seventy feet long, thirty-five feet wide, and twenty-one feet high.

Rodman M. Price, of San Francisco, moved to amend the substitute by striking out "Monterey" and inserting "San Francisco." He said that he had not been authorized by his people to offer a lot of ground or a building for the accommodation of the Legislature, but he knew that suitable accommodations would be furnished, and that grounds for the permanent buildings would be freely donated. Suggestions were made also to locate the seat of government at San Luis Obispo, at Benicia, at Stockton, and at Santa Barbara. The amendment of Mr. Price to insert "San Francisco" in the substitute was lost. A motion to strike out all after the word "San José" in the substitute was also lost. The substitute was then rejected—fifteen to twenty-three, and the section as reported by the committee was adopted—twenty-three to fourteen, and became a portion of the Constitution of the State.

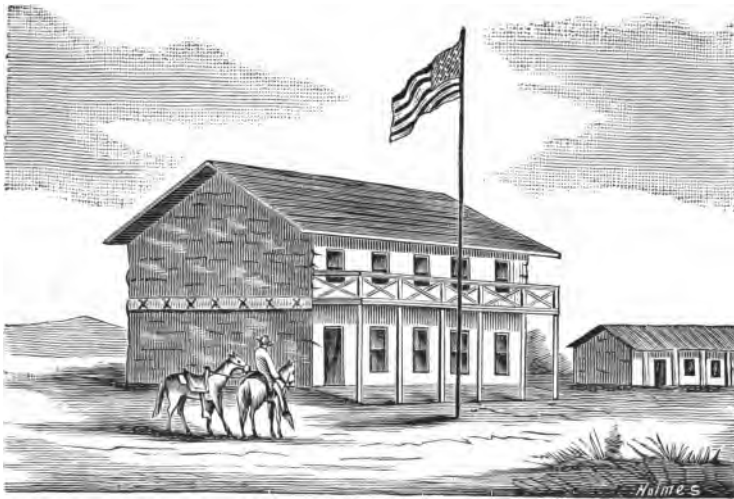

CAPITOL AT MONTEREY—1849.

The building in which the first Constitutional Convention met was probably the only one in California at that time suited for the purpose. It was a handsome two-story edifice of yellow sandstone, situated on a gentle slope above the town. It was named Colton Hall on account of its having been built by Walter Colton, the Alcalde, from the proceeds of the sale of city lots. The upper story, in which the convention met, formed a single hall, about sixty feet in length by twenty-five in breadth. A railing ran across the middle, dividing the members from the spectators. The former were seated at four long tables. The President occupied a rostrum at the further end, over which were suspended two American flags and a picture of Washington. The building is still standing.

The session of the first Legislature commenced at San José December 15, 1849. When the session opened, the town could not accommodate the large increase of population so suddenly thrown upon it, and complaint was made by the members that all the rooms, instead of being reserved for their use, had been rented to speculators, and either held at high prices or hired to lobbyists. The rooms which had been fitted up by the people of the town for the accommodation of the two branches of the Legislature were in separate buildings at some distance apart, and were poorly adapted for legislative purposes. The State House, in which the Assembly met, was a large adobe structure, which had been built by Sainsevain and Rochon on the south half of lot No. 6, block 1, range 1, south of the base line, which is on the east side of Market Square. It had been built for a hotel, but was the most appropriate house in the town for the accommodation of the Legislature. The Town Council had intended to lease the house for the use of the State at the rate of $4,000 per month, but upon reconsideration they decided to purchase the property. The owners of the building being unwilling to take the municipal authorities for security, several citizens executed a note for $34,000, and the deed to the property was delivered to trustees to be conveyed to the town whenever payment for it should be made. Several years afterward the trustees sued the Town Council for the money that had been advanced. This building was sixty feet long, forty feet wide, two stories high, and adorned with a piazza in front. The upper story contained but one room, with a stairway leading thereto. This room was occupied by the Assembly. The lower story was divided into four rooms. The largest one, forty by twenty feet, was afterward fitted up for the Senate Chamber. The other rooms were used by the Secretary and various committees. The building was destroyed by fire on April 29, 1853. The San Francisco "Alta" of the thirtieth, contained this news item announcing the destruction of the building :

FIRE AT SAN JOSÉ.—At a quarter past five o'clock yesterday morning, the Court House formerly the State House, in San José, was discovered to be on fire, and in a very short time the building was entirely destroyed. The loss is about $5,000. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. When it was first discovered, a box of coals was seen under the floor, and the supposed object was to rescue several prisoners who are now in the jail which adjoins the Court House. The purpose, however, was not attained; the thick adobes of the old jail were fireproof. The county records were all saved.

Until the Senate moved into the State House, the sittings of that body were held in the house of Isaac Branham, on the southwest corner of Market Plaza. On December 4, 1849, the authorities of Monterey authorized their delegation "to put at the disposal of the Legislature the whole premises known by the name of Colton Hall, which consists of two large rooms on the ground floor, suitable for the Senate and Assembly, one large saloon above for the Legislature, and two small back rooms for the Secretary, all with comfortable fireplaces." A proposition was also made by the citizens of San Francisco to provide accommodations if the Legislature should remove to that city. There was a strong disposition on the part of the members of the Legislature to remove to Monterey and accept the offer of Colton Hall, but the dreadful state of the roads prevented any change during that session. On the eighteenth the Senate appointed a committee to secure a suitable and properly furnished room for the use of that body, and on the twenty-first the committee reported that they had conferred with a committee of citizens of San José, and had concluded that the lower part of the State House, in the upper story of which the sessions of the Assembly were being held, was the only practicable place that could be obtained in the town. They also reported that the people of San José would have the hall prepared for occupation immediately, and that it would be assigned to their use free of charge. The Senate decided to accept the State House room, and that body moved into it on the twenty-eighth.

The subject of the permanent location of the seat of the State Government early occupied a large share of the attention of the first Legislature. The inferior accommodations which had been provided by the people of San José, as well as its then unsatisfactory geographical position, created a strong desire on the part of the members of the Legislature and a great number of the people for a change. At first there was a strong sympathy for the project of an immediate removal to Monterey, but as time wore on it died away, and the bills that had been introduced to provide for the removal of the Capital to that town were defeated. On January 29, 1850, a resolution was adopted by the Senate, directing the Building Committee to report a bill to provide for the location of the Capital at some point on the bays approachable by the largest class of steamers, and distant from any town then laid out.

On February eighteenth the Town Council of Monterey tendered to the State the free use of the public buildings there for a period of five years. A proposition was made to the Legislature on December 17, 1849, by Stevenson & Parker, for the location of the seat of government at "New York of the Pacific." They proposed to erect upon one of the squares of that city, or upon such other site as might be designated, suitable buildings, of such size as the Legislature might agree upon, for the use of the Legislature, the State officers, and for the Governor as a residence, and to furnish them in a manner that would equal the furniture used in the legislative chambers at Washington. The entire cost was not to exceed $100,000, and the buildings were to be completed by January 1, 1851. The grounds and buildings were to be given to the State, and in case they ceased to be used by the State they were to revert to the original owners. The same parties, on January 17, 1850, proposed further, to have ready by May 1, 1850, suitable offices for the State officers, accommodations for the Supreme Court, and a residence for the Governor, to be used temporarily until the permanent buildings could be erected, and they offered to give security for the performance of the terms of their offer.

On January thirtieth, James F. Reed, a citizen of San José, proposed to donate four blocks, in all four hundred and twenty by two hundred and twenty varas, to be selected by the Legislature from his addition to that town, as a site for the State buildings. In addition, he proposed to give one hundred and sixty-eight lots to be sold at auction, the money from the sale of which was to be applied to the erection of the buildings. If the Legislature concluded that two blocks would be sufficient, he then proposed to give two hundred lots, and in either event the State would get the fee simple title to the site.

Charles White, on the same day, proposed to donate a tract of land one and one half miles square, situated about three miles distant from the then legislative hall at San José, which land was eligible for building lots and contained building stone. The State was to reserve sufficient land for public use and sell the balance. One third of the net proceeds from the sales was to go to White, and the balance to the State, to be used in the erection of the buildings.

On February fourth, John Townsend and others offered, in case the Capital should be located at San José, to donate to the State about two hundred acres of land in that vicinity, from the sale of which a building fund could be realized.

The proposition of Gen. M. G. Vallejo, however, was the most munificent. On April third he proposed to lay out a city upon the Straits of Carquinez, upon grounds to be selected by five commissioners, three to be appointed by the Legislature and two by himself; to grant the State one hundred and fifty-six acres of land, and to donate and pay to the State within two years after the acceptance of his proposition $370,000, to be applied to the erection of public buildings. He asked that his proposition be submitted to a vote of the people at the next general election, and offered to give bonds for the performance of the terms of his contract.

The citizens of Monterey afterward tendered, in addition to their public buildings, all the land that would be needed, together with one thousand acres for a botanical garden or model farm.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported in favor of accepting the Vallejo proposition, and on April 22, 1850, an Act was passed and approved directing the Governor to submit to the people at the following general election the various propositions that had been made for the location of the Capital, and the Surveyor-General was directed to examine the various localities that had been proffered, and report to the next Legislature.

At the general State election held on October 7, 1850, the people voted on the propositions with the following result:

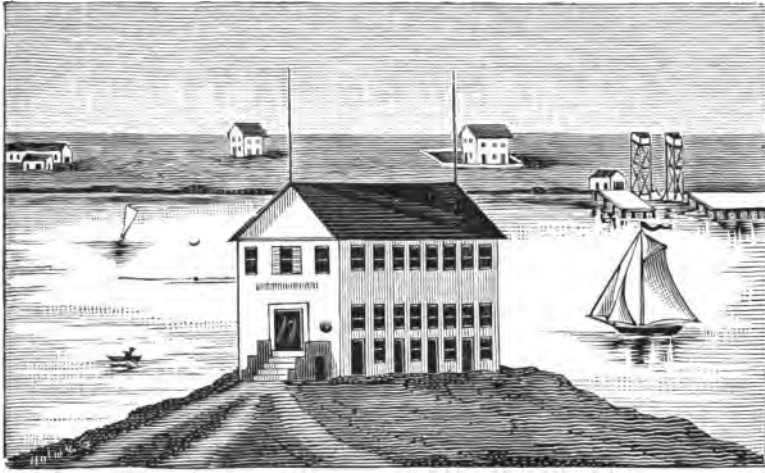

Vallejo, seven thousand four hundred and seventy-seven; San José, one thousand two hundred and ninety-two; San Diego, fourteen; Monterey, three hundred and ninety-nine; Santa Cruz, two; Reed's proposition, six hundred and fifty-one; Gilroy, seventy-one; Eureka, three hundred and one; Stockton, six; Sacramento, one hundred and sixty; San Francisco, twenty-five; Benicia, seventy; Nevada, eighty-two; Downieville, one hundred and fifty; Hamilton, ten; Yuba City, fourteen; scattering, five.

At the opening of the second legislative session, in 1851, General Vallejo and the parties interested with him in obtaining a removal of the seat of government from San José to Vallejo, appeared at the former place and exerted themselves to consummate the change. They succeeded in turning a strong current in favor of their project, but the scheme had also an able and energetic opposition. On January 14, 1851, Vallejo presented a communication to the Senate, in which he stated he was prepared to give bonds, with ample security, for the fulfillment of the proposition which he had submitted to the preceding Legislature. On the sixteenth, the Surveyor-General submitted a report upon the advantages and disadvantages of the different localities proposed for the establishment of the Capital, and the report favored a removal to Vallejo. The next day the majority of the Senate Committee on Public Buildings reported in favor of accepting Vallejo's proposition, but George B. Tingley, from the same committee, submitted a minority report on the twentieth in which he vigorously opposed the change and favored San José for the seat of government. The majority of the committee reported a bill in accordance with their views, and it was passed by the Senate on the twenty-third by a vote of eleven to two. The next day Mr. Tingley filed a written protest against the passage of the bill upon the grounds that Vallejo could and would pay the three hundred and seventy thousand dollars in State scrip, which was then worth but fifty cents on the dollar, and that the change of the Capital would be injurious to the State.

An effort was made in the House to defeat the bill. The citizens of San José sent a communication to the Assembly offering, if the Capital should be retained at that city, to donate to the State $406,000 worth of land, and to furnish accommodations for the Legislature and State officers free of charge until such time as the State should become able to pay rent. On February first the removal bill came up for discussion in the House. The chamber was crowded with interested spectators. After a warm debate, it was passed by a vote of twenty-six to eight. This Act provided that after the close of that session Vallejo should be the permanent seat of government, provided General Vallejo should submit a satisfactory bond, to be approved by the Legislature and Governor, conditioned that he would faithfully carry out the terms of his offer; that he would provide for the space of three years a State House and other offices of State equal to or better than those then occupied, and without expense to the State; and that in case he refused or failed to perform the conditions of his proposition, the law would become void. The Governor approved the bill on the fourth, and on the same day Vallejo submitted his bond, which was approved after a great deal of opposition and discussion.

Governor McDougal caused the governmental archives to be removed from San José to Vallejo in June, 1851. General Vallejo was slow in performing his part of the contract, and in September it was found that the State House and offices were not sufficiently completed to preserve the public records or to accommodate the public business, and the Governor ordered a removal back to San José, which was accordingly done. As the time approached for the assembling of the Legislature the question as to where it should meet was much discussed. It was held by some that Vallejo was the seat of government, and that the Legislature would have to meet there at all events, while others claimed that inasmuch as General Vallejo had not fulfilled the terms of his proposition the removal Act was void, and that San José was still the Capital. On December 30, 1851, a meeting of members elect to the Legislature was held at San Francisco for the purpose of consulting as to the proper place for holding the session. Twelve Senators and thirty Assemblyman were present, and after a debate and the reception of the opinion of Attorney-General McDougall that Vallejo was by law the seat of the government, it was decided to meet at that place. Accordingly, on January 5, 1852, the third session of the Legislature began at Vallejo. The building provided was of wood. It was afterward destroyed by fire. When the Legislature met, the State House was entirely unfurnished, and the rostrums for the presiding officers had not been built. So uncertain had it been whether the Legislature would meet there that the inhabitants of that city were illy prepared to accommodate the increase to the population. Rooms and beds were scarce and upwards of one hundred persons were forced to seek quarters on board the steamer Empire, on which they had come up. Chairs were so scarce in the town that the members were seated in their halls on temporary benches made of boards placed on stools and nail kegs. It was not until the eighth that a sufficient number of chairs arrived to comfortably seat them. The legislators soon began to complain that their wardrobes were becoming soiled, and that there was not even a washerwoman in town to keep them in clean collars. To add to the discomfort, food of all kinds became amusingly scarce. Work, however, was prosecuted with energy in the State House, but it was some time before it was in anything like order. A strong disposition was manifested for a removal of the Legislature to some other city that could afford superior accommodations.

On December 29, 1851, the Court of Sessions of Sacramento County passed a resolution tendering the newly completed Court House at Sacramento to the Legislature in which to hold the sessions, and on that evening a mass meeting of the citizens of that city was held, and the action of the Court was indorsed, and, as an additional inducement, they proposed to tender to the State officers and members of the Legislature a grand complimentary ball on the evening of January thirteenth. The Common Council of San Francisco, on January fifth, invited the Legislature to meet in their city. The people of San Jose offered, as an inducement to hold the session there, to board the members at the rate of $14 per week; and the citizens of Benicia tendered the free use of suitable buildings at that place. On the first day of the session protests were presented to each House against meeting at Vallejo, upon the ground that General Vallejo had not complied with the terms of his contract, that, therefore, the law designating his city as the seat of government was void, and that if the session were held there the General would insist that it amounted to an acceptance on the part of the State, of Vallejo as the Capital. On the seventh, Governor McDougal transmitted to the Senate a written protest against the Legislature meeting at Vallejo, based substantially on the same grounds. The feeling in favor of a removal grew stronger each day, and on the tenth the people of Vallejo memorialized the Legislature to allow them another week to prepare suitable accommodations, but their petition was laid on the table.

On January ninth the Assembly adopted a joint resolution for a removal to Sacramento, and to meet in that city on the thirteenth. The next day the matter came up in the Senate and was defeated by a tie vote, but on the twelfth both Houses adjourned, to meet at Sacramento on the sixteenth. The steamer Empire left Vallejo for Sacramento, with the Legislature, at three o'clock on the afternoon of the thirteenth, and reached the latter city the next day. A dense crowd of people were at the landing awaiting her arrival, and she was received with the firing of cannon and other manifestations of appreciation. The work of fitting up the Sacramento Court House was immediately commenced, and by noon on the sixteenth everything was arranged, and the two Houses met in it. The grand ball was given on that evening by the citizens of Sacramento, who charged themselves $20 apiece for the tickets. A joint resolution was adopted on the sixteenth authorizing the Governor to have the State archives removed from San José to Sacramento, to remain during the session, and requiring the Governor and the Executive State officers to reside in Sacramento during the session. The State officers prepared to obey the order, when an injunction was served upon them, issued upon the petition of J. D. Hoppe, and other citizens of San José, who claimed that that city was the true seat of government. The restraining order was dissolved, however, and a few days afterward the records were boxed up and shipped to the new Capital, where they arrived on the twenty-first. On April thirtieth an Act was passed recognizing Vallejo as the permanent seat of government, and directing the Governor to remove the archives and State offices from Sacramento to that city without unnecessary delay upon the adjournment of the Legislature. Early in the session a joint committee was appointed to confer with General Vallejo to ascertain if he intended to carry out the terms of his agreement, and on January twenty-fourth that gentleman addressed a letter to the committee stating that since he had made the proposition, he had become so embarrassed as to be unable to perform his obligations, and asked that his bond be canceled. On March seventh the City of Sacramento was inundated by high water, and there was for a time a disposition to remove the Legislature to San Francisco.

As in the preceding year, as the time for the meeting of the Legislature of 1853 approached, the question as to where the session should be held was agitated. General Vallejo had become so embarrassed as not to be able to perform the conditions of his proposition, and the accommodations at the "permanent seat of government" were but little better than those which had been afforded at that place to the Legislature of 1852. The disposition was strong to have the Legislature remove to some other city immediately after it was organized. The citizens of Benicia and Sacramento held out flattering inducements for a change to their cities respectively, with the odds largely in favor of the former place, where it was urged there would be no danger of a flood, such as had rendered Sacramento so unpleasant in 1852. Immediately on the organization of the Legislature, resolutions were introduced to adjourn the session to San José, to Benicia, and to Sacramento, but they failed. The removal question, however, soon absorbed everything else, and the issue was made up between Vallejo and Benicia. The citizens of the latter place agreed to donate the free use of their new City Hall to the Legislature, to provide suitable offices for the State officials, and to pay the expenses of the removal, if the Legislature would meet in their city. On February fourth the Assembly adopted a resolution to adjourn to meet at Benicia on the eleventh. On the same day the Senate concurred and Vallejo again lost the Legislature. The same day an Act was passed, the preamble of which recited that by the law which located the Capital at Vallejo it was provided that if General Vallejo failed or refused to comply with the terms of his proposition, in whole or in part, the Act should become void; and that General Vallejo had petitioned the Legislature to be released from the performance of his bond given under that Act, and had expressed his inability to comply with its conditions. It was therefore provided that the permanent seat of government should, on and after February 5, 1853, be established at Benicia, if Vallejo should fail or refuse to comply with the conditions of his bond, or should be released from it.

The Act also provided that he should be released upon condition of his waiving all claims for relief or damages against the State, founded upon the location at or removal from Vallejo of the Capital. On the fourteenth General Vallejo executed the release. It was approved by the State authorities, and on the twenty-fourth the Mayor of Benicia executed a deed to the State for the City Hall property, conditioned that in case the seat of Government should be thereafter removed from that city the property should revert to the municipality. On May eighteenth another Act was passed declaring Benicia the permanent seat of Government in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, and it was declared to be unlawful for any Court or Judge to grant a writ of mandamus or other order directed against the State officers to compel them to remove the State archives or offices from Benicia to any other point in the State. The building in which the Legislature met at Benicia was of brick. It covered about the same surface area as the present Court House at Sacramento, and was two stories in height. The rear end of the lower story constituted the Senate Chamber, which was approached by a hallway from the main entrance. There were four large rooms in the building on that floor opening into the hallway between the Senate Chamber and the entrance. In the upper story the Assembly Chamber occupied the rear part, and the front of the building was divided into two rooms. The building is still standing and is used for a school-house.

CAPITOL AT BENICIA—1853-1854.

As early as October, 1853, a movement was set on foot to remove the permanent seat of Government from Benicia to Sacramento, and soon after the organization of the Legislature of 1854 the question of removal was second in importance to the election of the United States Senator. It was argued that the conveniences to the members at Sacramento would be greater, the accommodations for State officers would be more ample, and greater security would be provided for the public records; and there was a strong disposition to make the change. Governor Bigler, in his annual message of January 4, 1854, said:

Although deeply impressed with the importance, as well as the necessity of economizing in every department of the State Government, I feel it incumbent upon me to direct your attention to the insecure condition of the public archives. The entire public records, as well as the State Library, now numbering about four thousand volumes, are kept in fragile frame buildings, without fire-proof vaults or safes. The public records are now invaluable, and if destroyed, could not be replaced, and their loss would involve the State and individuals in serious difficulties. In the other States of the Confederacy, the officers of State are provided with substantial brick or stone buildings, and the public records rendered entirely secure by being deposited in fire-proof vaults or safes, provided for that purpose. In this truly important matter, we are admonished of the necessity of increased safeguards by the many and terrible conflagrations which have occurred during the past year. I trust, therefore, that you will, without delay, adopt such measures as you may deem necessary to render entirely secure the public archives in the several offices, and also the State Library.

On January sixth the Governor sent a special message to the Legislature, transmitting a communication from the Mayor and Common Council of Sacramento, offering, if the Capital should be removed to that city, to grant to the State Government the free use of the Court House, and other suitable rooms, for the accommodation of the State officers, together with fire-proof vaults for the security of the public moneys and records; to remove the members of the Legislature, and the State officers, and the Government furniture and archives, free of charge, from Benicia; and to grant to the State, for a building lot for the Capitol, the public square between I and J and Ninth and Tenth Streets. The Court House tendered for the use of the Legislature was the same building in which the session of 1852 had been held. It was of brick, sixty by eighty feet in dimensions, and two stories high. The people of Benicia offered the free use of the buildings then occupied for State purposes, for as long a time as they might be desired. The propositions were referred to special committees, to whom, also, were referred the various resolutions and bills that had been offered on the subject of the Capital removal.

Early in the session joint and concurrent resolutions were offered to remove the Legislature to Sacramento, but they failed, and it looked very much as if the removal proposition would be defeated. Finally, on February ninth, A. P. Catlin introduced a bill in the Senate to fix the permanent seat of government at Sacramento. In the Assembly there was a clear majority in favor of the removal, but in the Senate Benicia had the advantage. Catlin, however, succeeded in carrying the bill through the Senate. The measure passed that body on the eighteenth by a vote of thirteen to eleven. The Senate adjourned, however, without assenting to the title of the bill, and on the twentieth that question came up. After a number of amendments had been voted down the title was approved. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill had been passed was then made, and the remainder of the day was consumed in voting on motions for delay, when the whole matter was sent over until the next day by the withdrawal of enough members to leave no quorum. On the twenty-first a motion to indefinitely postpone the motion to reconsider was carried. The bill went to the Assembly on that day, and a motion to reject it was defeated by a vote of thirty-two to thirty-five. On the twenty-third the bill was referred to a committee. It was favorably reported on the next day, and came up on its passage. Various amendments were defeated, and the bill was passed as it had come originally from the Senate, by a vote of thirty-nine to thirty-five. On the twenty-fifth a motion to reconsider was defeated, and on that day it met with the approval of Governor Bigler. The Act repealed all former Acts in relation to the location of the Capital, and provided that from and after one day after its passage the seat of government should be located permanently at Sacramento. A resolution to adjourn to the new Capital was immediately passed. On the twenty-eighth, the Governor and the other State officers arrived at Sacramento, where they were received with numerous demonstrations of rejoicing. The Sutter Rifles paraded the streets, acting as an escort to the Governor. The procession, after marching through the principal streets, halted in front of the Orleans Hotel. Here Alderman Spaulding delivered an address of welcome to the State officers and members of the Legislature. Speeches were also made by Governor Bigler, General J. W. Denver, Mayor Hardenburg, J. W. Cofroth and others. On March first the Legislature met in the Sacramento Court House.

On March twenty-fourth an Act was passed requiring the sessions of the Supreme Court, which were then being held in San Francisco, to be held at the seat of Government; and on the twenty-seventh Justices Heydenfeldt and Wells decided, Chief Justice Murray dissenting, that San José was the legal Capital and that all the acts in relation to removals which had been passed were unconstitutional. An order was entered by the Court directing the transfer of the judicial archives to San José, and ordering the Sheriff of Santa Clara County to provide suitable accommodations. On the thirtieth the change was made.

After the election in 1854 the question of the removal of the Capital was again discussed, and so confident were the people of San José that the seat of Government would be removed to that city, in view of the favorable ruling of the Supreme Court, that extensive preparations were made there for the accommodation of the State officers and the Legislature. On October twenty-first a writ of mandate was issued by Judge Hester, of the Third District Court, at the instance of Thos. L. Vermule and others, directing the State officers to show cause why they should not forthwith remove their offices and papers to San José. The Attorney-General answered on the twenty-eighth, and, on the hearing the Judge, made an order directing that the removal be made. The matter was carried to the Supreme Court, and on December twenty-eighth Justices Murray and Bryan (who had been appointed vice Wells, deceased) filed opinions reversing the judgment of Judge Hester, and an order was made directing the Clerk of the Supreme Court to remove the records of that Court to Sacramento, and ordering the Sheriff of that county to provide suitable accommodations for the Court. The Court then adjourned to meet at Sacramento on the first Monday of February, 1855. Their decision was that Sacramento was the legal State Capital. Justice Heydenfeldt dissented from these opinions, and held that as the Act to remove the Capital to Sacramento had not been passed by a two-thirds vote in the Legislature, it was unconstitutional. He also held that the Act to remove to Vallejo was unconstitutional, for the reason that it appeared on its face that in its passage the Legislature had been prompted by a consideration of the amount of money which General Vallejo had agreed to pay, that that had amounted to a sale of the seat of Government, and that it had not been the deliberate judgment of the Legislature. He therefore concluded that San José was the legal Capital.

The first Court House that was erected at Seventh and I Streets in Sacramento City, and in which the sessions of 1852 and 1854 were held, was commenced in June, 1850, and completed on December 24, 1851. It was destroyed in the great fire of July 13, 1854, which consumed a large portion of the business part of the city. On the fourteenth the "Democratic State Journal" gave the following as one of the incidents connected with the destruction of the Court House:

PATRIOTIC.—When the fire threatened the Court House with destruction, the Governor (Bigler), who was present, and who had been working from the commencement of the fire wherever Sacramento most needed a soldier, asked those present to assist him in saving the furniture. To this many objected, on the ground that private parties, who could not suffer the loss as well as the county, needed their services. A full length portrait of Washington was standing against the southern wall, and, pointing to it, the Governor said: "See, there is the portrait of the Father of your Country; will you permit it to be destroyed?" when a general rush was made for the portrait, and it was saved.

Immediately after the fire a contract was entered into between Joseph Nougues and the county officers for the erection of the present Court House. As originally arranged the building answered the following description: Extreme height, sixty-one feet; dimensions, eighty by one hundred and twenty feet; with a portico supported by ten pillars, three feet six inches in diameter by thirty-one feet six inches in height. The ground floor was devoted to a County Prison. On the same floor were two separate offices containing fire-proof vaults and occupied by the State Controller and State Treasurer. The second floor was devoted to a Senate chamber, fifty-seven by thirty feet, and an Assembly room, seventy-two feet eight inches by forty-one feet four inches, together with nine rooms for clerks and officers of the Legislature. The style of architecture is Ionic. The original contract price was $100,600, and the subsequent contracts made the total cost of the building to the county $240,000. The cornerstone was laid September 27, 1854, with Masonic honors, and the brick work was completed November ninth following. The building was finished January 1, 1855. It was rented to the State for Capitol purposes at an annual rent of $12,000, and was used for that purpose from 1855 until the completion of the present Capitol.

On April 18, 1856, the Legislature passed a law to provide for the construction of a Capitol building on the public square between I and J and Ninth and Tenth Streets, in the City of Sacramento. By the Act Controller Whitman, Secretary of State Douglass, and G. Griswold were appointed a Board of Capitol Commissioners, with power to make contracts and superintend the erecting of the building. The proposed Capitol was to be ready for occupation on or before January 1, 1858, and the cost was limited to $300,000. The law also authorized the issuance of thirty-year bonds to that amount to pay the expenses of construction. The Board organized a few days after the passage of the Act, and immediately advertised for plans. On August 13, 1856, they adopted the plans submitted by Reuben Clark. The building contemplated in these plans was to be in the form of a Greek cross, of the Corinthian style, with a rotunda and dome. It was to be two hundred and twelve feet long and one hundred and forty-five feet wide, to have a cellar beneath for the reception of fuel and rubbish. Above the cellar was to be the basement story, raised about five feet above the grade of the lot. The height of this story was to be fourteen feet, and it was to contain the apartments of the executive and judicial officers. The second story was to be thirty-six feet in height, and in it were to be located a circular Senate chamber, sixty-four and one half by fifty feet, and an Assembly hall, in the form of a half square, eighty-four by fifty-two and one half feet. The library was also to be on this floor, and above it were to be a number of committee rooms. The height of the dome from the ground line was to be one hundred and thirty-two feet, and the rotunda was to be forty feet in diameter and one hundred and eighteen feet in height. It was designed that up to the first floor the walls should be of granite, and above that of brick, coated on the outside with mastic. On September first the Board advertised for proposals for erecting the building, and on November first the bids—sixteen in number—were opened, and the contract was awarded to Joseph Nougues for $200,000. The highest bid was $290,000. On December second the contractor staked off the ground for the building, and on the fourth the earth was broken for its foundation. The bill provided that the contractor should be paid in bonds as the work progressed, but on the fifteenth the State officers refused to issue the bonds for the work that had been done, on the strength of a decision which had been rendered by the Supreme Court, declaring in effect that the indebtedness created by the Act being in excess of the amount permitted by the Constitution, was void. The contractor instituted an action of mandamus to compel the issuance of the bonds, but the Supreme Court decided adversely to him, and the work was stopped and never resumed. On April 11, 1859, the Legislature allowed the claim of Nougues on account of labor and material furnished under this contract for the sum of $5,388 05.

The want of a suitable State Capitol building was felt more as the public business increased in volume. Governor Johnson, in his annual message of 1858, in referring to that subject, said:

After the frequent changes we have witnessed of the seat of Government, at length a degree of permanency has been given to it which fully justifies speedy action being taken for the erection of public buildings, suitable for the various departments of Government. Independent of that laudable pride which, in the present condition of public affairs, should impel such action—in a pecuniary sense it would be serviceable to the public good. The amount of rents now paid by the State Government fully equals the interest on $300,000, at seven per cent per annum, the same rate which is to be paid on our public debt. That sum, or even less, will suffice to erect a suitable building for the necessary purposes of the State, and I recommend the passage of a law, at this session, making provision for the erection of such a building.

The Governor further recommended the erection of a first-class building, and the appropriation of $100,000 a year, for three years, for the purpose of paying for its construction. On February 3, 1858, R. D. Ferguson offered a resolution in the Assembly for the appointment of a joint committee, to confer with the Supervisors of Sacramento County and ascertain on what terms the county would dispose of the Court House, then occupied as the Capitol building. The resolution was adopted by both Houses, and, on the next day, the committee was appointed. The Supervisors offered to dispose of the Court House for $125,000, and on February twenty-seventh W. I. Ferguson introduced a bill in the Senate to provide for the purchase of that building by the State at the price named.

The bill was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings, and on March thirteenth a majority of the committee recommended its passage. The minority submitted a dissenting report on the seventeenth, based on the following reasons: That the State had been donated a square of land in Sacramento, valued at about $40,000, which would revert to the city if not used; that the State had, at a cost of three thousand dollars, procured plans of a magnificent Capitol of suitable size; that a branch prison would shortly be established, and the granite needed for the erection of a Capitol building could then be taken out and prepared by the prisoners; that the brick needed could also be manufactured at a small cost by the same labor; that a Capitol building could be so erected at a cost of not over $200,000; that the Court House was not fitted for the purposes of a Capitol, as it had been hastily erected for another purpose, and had become prematurely old and dilapidated; and that to fit it up to make it answer for a Capitol would incur an expense much larger than to erect a new building. They therefore recommended the indefinite postponement of the bill. The Senate had the matter under consideration until towards the end of the session, when it was lost.

On March 13, 1858, Nougues, the contractor to build the Capitol under the Act of 1856, sent a communication to the Legislature proposing, for $125,000, to erect upon the public square which had been donated to the State by the City of Sacramento, a building in all respects according to the plans of the Court House, except that instead of having a prison in the basement, it should be fitted up for public offices. He proposed to have the building ready for occupancy by December first following. This offer met the same fate as the Court House purchasing bill.

Soon after the meeting of the Legislature of 1858, a movement was inaugurated to remove the seat of government from Sacramento to Oakland. On March twenty-third, a memorial was read in the Senate from the Mayor, Council, and citizens of the latter city, asking for the change. S. B. Bell offered a resolution to appoint a joint committee to visit Oakland with a view to ascertaining its advantages as a site for the Capital and to receive such proposals to donate land, buildings, etc., as the people of that city might be disposed to make. A like memorial was presented to the Assembly, and was referred to a select committee, who on the twenty-seventh reported a resolution to appoint a similar committee to the one proposed in the Senate. This resolution was adopted by both houses and the committee was raised. The three Assemblymen on the joint committee reported on April sixth that the citizens of Oakland proposed to furnish at a nominal rent suitable buildings for the use of the State until a Capitol should be erected; that they proposed to donate twenty acres within the city limits for a site for the contemplated public buildings; and that the location was better than at Sacramento. They strongly recommended the removal, and presented a bill to the House to provide for the permanent location of the Capital at Oakland. The two Senators concurred in the report, except that they made no recommendation in regard to a removal. The bill to remove to Oakland was taken up in the Assembly on the twenty-first and defeated by a vote of forty-four to fifteen.

In the Assembly, on March 2, 1859, the Committee on Public Buildings, acting in accordance with the direction of that body, reported a bill to provide for the construction of a State Capitol in Sacramento. The bill contemplated the erection of a building in accordance with the plans which had been prepared under the Act of 1856, at a cost of not over $120,000. The consideration of this was made the special order for the fourteenth, at which time W. P. Rodgers offered a substitute, to authorize the Common Council of Oakland to levy a special tax of $10 on each $100 worth of real estate in that city, and the Supervisors of Alameda County to levy a tax of fifty cents on the $100 of real estate in that county, to create a fund for building a Capitol building at Oakland; and to authorize the Governor to accept for the State a donation of ten acres of land in that city as a site for the building, and to issue his proclamation of the removal of the seat of government to Oakland. A resolution was adopted by the House, by a vote of thirty-two to thirty, raising a committee of five to proceed to Oakland and inquire into the expediency of locating the seat of government there. On the twenty-second the bills again came up, when Henry Hancock introduced a bill to appropriate $200,000 for the purpose of commencing the erection of a Capitol at Oakland. On the same day four of the visiting committee submitted a report warmly recommending the removal, while the remaining member expressed the view that it would be impolitic to leave Sacramento. A week later the Rodgers bill was defeated by a vote of twenty-eight to thirty, and the Sacramento bill was refused engrossment by a vote of fifteen to forty-one. The Hancock bill was laid on the table on April ninth.

Governor Weller, in his annual message of 1860, recommended the appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose of erecting a Capitol building at Sacramento, and he argued that it would be a move in the direction of economy, as the State was then paying $8,000 per annum rental for a building—an amount equal to eight per cent per annum on the estimated cost of the structure which had been contemplated by the Act of 1856. Since the adjournment of the Legislature of 1859 the question of the removal of the seat of government from Sacramento had been agitated to a considerable extent in San Francisco and Oakland, and it was anticipated that an effort to remove to one of those cities would be strongly pressed in the session of 1860. On January twentieth of that year, R. A. Redman introduced a bill in the Senate to remove the seat of government to Oakland in July following, provided that city would, within sixty days after the passage of the Act, execute a deed to the State for a quantity of land, not less than ten acres in extent and suitably located in that city, for the State buildings. The bill was referred to a select committee, but it never came up again.

On the twenty-fourth, a bill was introduced in the Assembly by W. B. Maxson, to locate the Capital at San Francisco after July eighth. It was referred to the same committee, and met with the fate of the Redman bill. On the twenty-seventh, the Senate adopted a resolution to appoint a joint committee to take into consideration the permanent location and removal, if deemed expedient, of the Capital, and on February seventh the House concurred in the action of the Senate. The committee visited San Francisco, San José, and Oakland, and on March eighth submitted their report. They had received from the Supervisors of San Francisco the offer of a donation of any public square, except Portsmouth, in that city as a location for the building; and they also had proposed to issue city bonds to the amount of $150,000 for the purpose of raising money to erect the building, with the understanding that the State should own the land and building so long as it should be used for the purposes indicated, but in case the Capital should be removed from San Francisco the property should revert to the city. As an additional inducement for the location of the Capital at San Francisco, Beideman & Page, proposed to convey to the State for a site for the structure four blocks of land, and to improve the streets around them. The citizens of Oakland renewed the offer that had been made by them the year before. The authorities and citizens of San José claimed that the removal of the Capital from that city had been unconstitutional, and that, therefore, it should be relocated there. The authorities of Sacramento tendered the free use of the then State House for as long a time as the State should see fit to occupy it. Four of the committee recommended that it was inexpedient to remove from Sacramento, and that an appropriation should be made for the immediate construction of a State House in that city. On March twentieth, three other members of the committee submitted a lengthy report recommending the removal of the seat of government to San Francisco at the close of the then session, and they presented a bill to that end.

On January 23, 1860, S. A. Merritt introduced a bill in the Senate to provide for the construction of a Capitol building in Sacramento, and on March twelfth the majority of the committee to whom it had been referred recommended its passage, with sundry amendments. On the fifteenth, the minority of the committee recommended its indefinite postponement for various reasons. The bill came up in the Senate for discussion on the twenty-first, and it was amended to extend the appropriation for the entire work to half a million of dollars; to provide for the removal of the Supreme Court to San Francisco; and to authorize the city authorities of Sacramento to condemn for a site for the Capitol the four blocks of land between L and N, Tenth and Twelfth Streets, which land it was agreed should be purchased by the city and donated to the State. The bill passed the Senate on the twenty-third by a vote of twenty-six to seven. On February twentieth, John Conness introduced a bill in the Assembly to build a Capitol building at Sacramento. This Act was almost a duplicate of the Merritt bill. It was favorably reported by the majority of the committee to which it had been referred on March fourteenth; and on the same day an adverse minority report was submitted, because the title to the land to be donated for the location of the Capitol would be imperfect, because the land would be insufficient in quantity; and because the financial condition of the State did not warrant the appropriation of the sum of money contemplated in the bill. After a discussion lasting several days, the Assembly, on the twenty-fourth, passed a substitute for the Conness bill by a vote of forty-six to twenty-four. This bill differed from the Merritt bill in that it did not provide for the removal of the Supreme Court to San Francisco. The substitute bill was passed by the Senate on the twenty-sixth, and on the next day a motion to reconsider was lost by a vote of five to twenty-five. On the twenty-ninth Governor Downey approved the bill.

The law provided for the appointment of a Commission, consisting of the Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, A. C. Monson, and Alfred Redington, whose duty it was made to contract for and superintend the erection of the Capitol upon the tract of land between L and N, Tenth and Twelfth Streets, in Sacramento. After condemning the land mentioned, the Commission was directed to adopt plans for the building, to appoint a supervising architect, and to make contracts for its construction. The entire cost of the building was limited to $500,000, and the City of Sacramento was to pay for the land.

On April 4, 1860, the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of Sacramento deeded to the State the blocks of land mentioned in the law, and an ordinance was passed on that day vacating the streets and alleys within the limits named. On the sixth the Commissioners advertised for plans for the contemplated building, and on May nineteenth the seven plans which had been submitted were opened and examined, but it was not until July fourteenth that the Board determined to accept the one submitted by M. F. Butler. In that same month Reuben Clark was appointed Superintending Architect. On June second proceedings were commenced in the Sixth District Court to condemn the lands selected as the site for the building. The Commissioners appointed by the Court to estimate the value of the property sought to be condemned reported, on July fifth, that the compensation to the owners should be $65,517. A tax was levied upon and collected from the citizens of Sacramento to pay that amount. On September third the Capitol Commissioners opened the proposals for the construction of the foundation and the erection of the basement story walls of the building. Seven bids were submitted, the highest being $130,000, and the lowest—that of Michael Fennell—$80,000. The contract was awarded to Fennell, and was signed on the twentieth.

It was agreed in the contract that work should be commenced before October first, and finished within ten months. Ground was broken in excavating for the foundation on September twenty-fourth, and that work was completed on October twenty-fifth, when the laying of concrete was commenced. On April 1, 1861, Fennell withdrew from the further prosecution of the work. The Legislature on May 20, 1861, authorized the Commissioners to make an amicable settlement with him and to cancel his contract, provided he would file a release of all claims against the State. The law provided that the matter should then be arbitrated, and the Commissioners were directed to make a new contract for the completion of the building to the extent contemplated in the Fennell contract, and the sum of $50,000 was appropriated to carry on the work. Some time was spent in letting the second contract, and until the middle of August, 1861, little or nothing was accomplished. On May 15, 1861, the corner stone was laid with imposing Masonic ceremonies, in the presence of a large concourse of people. On July twenty-ninth the contract to complete the work laid out was let to G. W. Blake and P. Edward Conner, and they continued to work until January 1, 1862, when they quit, having suffered severe losses in the great flood. On April 19, 1862, the Legislature passed an Act directing the Commissioners to cancel this contract also, and the contractors were awarded $55,570 26 to pay them for the labor and materials they had furnished, and for damages they had sustained by the flood. The same law provided for a modification of the plans, so that the total cost of the building should not be, when added to the amount which had then been expended, over $500,000, and it was provided that work should be continued by day's labor until the unexpended appropriation should be disposed of.

The Thirteenth Session of the Legislature met at Sacramento, January 6, 1862. The city had been overtaken with a disastrous flood on December 9, 1861, and was not particularly inviting when the Legislature met there a month later. This calamity opened again the subject of removal of the State Capitol to some other point in the State, and it was discussed to a considerable extent in the newspapers. On the tenth of January, the day on which Governor Stanford was inaugurated, another flood visited the city, and on the next day the Senate, by a vote of twenty to thirteen, adopted a concurrent resolution to adjourn the meeting of the Legislature to San Francisco for the remainder of the session. The Assembly refused to concur, by a vote of thirty-six to forty. However, on the twenty-second, a resolution to adjourn to San Francisco passed both Houses, and on the twenty-fourth the Legislature met in the Exchange Building on Battery Street, in that city. Unsuccessful efforts were subsequently made to remove the offices of the State officers to San Francisco.

On March 27, 1863, an Act was passed levying an annual ad valorem tax of five cents on the $100 of property in the State to create a Special Capitol Fund, and the Act was to remain in force until the building should be finished, and the grounds graded and fenced. On April twentieth, another Act was passed directing the Commissioners to let contracts for the purchase of materials and to employ labor by the day.

Governor Stanford, in his annual message of December 9, 1863, reported that work on the State Capitol building had been renewed in June, 1863, and had been prosecuted with vigor under the direction of the Commissioners, who had been compelled to proceed cautiously, and they had been actuated by a desire to keep within, rather than go beyond, the limits of the legislative appropriations. The Governor said:

This method of constructing a State Capitol will be a long and tedious one, and, at best, the yearly advance it will make will not keep pace with the people's expectations. The building should be finished as early as possible, and the means provided to insure that result. In a young State like our own, poor in comparison to what its future promises, the conviction has become strong in my mind that coming generations should share with the present in the erection of any great and permanent public building. And while thus calling upon the future for aid an edifice should be constructed that will be satisfactory to the grandeur of the coming time. In all new countries the first generation has much to overcome, which inevitably results largely to the benefit of those that follow after; and the older a growing State becomes, the more ability it has to bear burdens that have been lightened by the sacrifices of its earlier years.

The State Capitol of California that is to endure for generations, should be a structure that the future will be proud of, and surrounded by grounds that should extend into the dimensions of an ample park. Such grounds can now be had at a comparatively nominal sum, and the peculiar salubrity of our climate would, in a few years, surround the edifice with a beauty and luxuriousness that no other Capitol in the country could boast.

I would, therefore, recommend that, consulting the future, with a due consideration for the present, a law should be passed, and submitted to the people of the State, providing for the issuance of bonds for State Capitol purposes, sufficient to complete the work in the manner proposed.

On December 16, 1863, A. C. Henry introduced in the Senate an Act to repeal the Act providing a special fund for the construction of the Capitol building at Sacramento, but the bill was never reported back from the Committee on Public Buildings, to which it was referred. On January 5, 1864, a bill was introduced in the Assembly by Frederick Lux for the completion of the Capitol. The bill contemplated the issuance of State bonds to the amount of $1,000,000, payable in 1884, the proceeds to be expended for the immediate completion of the building. This bill was reported back with amendments on the fifteenth, and, after being lengthily debated, was indefinitely postponed on March sixteenth, by a vote of thirty-nine to twenty-three. On February 8, 1864, a bill was introduced in the Assembly by Seth Martin to provide a special fund for the construction of the Capitol building, and to submit the same to a vote of the people, but on March eighteenth it was indefinitely postponed on motion of its author. The session of the Legislature closed without any action upon the subject of the Capitol.

On February 10, 1866, Thomas Hardy offered a resolution in the Senate to instruct the Committee on Public Buildings to report upon the advisability and economy of donating the Capitol building and whatever other buildings in Sacramento the State had any interest in, to that city, and of removing the Capitol to some other locality. The resolution was set for April seventh—beyond the constitutional period for the session of the Legislature—by a vote of twenty-two to fourteen. On March second, an Act was approved to provide for the speedy completion of the Capitol building. It imposed an annual ad valorem tax of five cents on the $100 to raise a fund for that purpose, and the law was to remain in force until the Governor should declare by proclamation that the building was finished.

The State Capitol Commissioners reported, under date of November 1, 1867, that during the years 1863, 1864 and 1865, there had been levied an annual tax of five cents on the $100 to create a special fund for the construction of the Capitol building; that in 1866 and 1867 the tax had been increased to 10 cents: that the amounts derived from this taxation had been in 1863, $62,000; 1864, $69,641 96; 1865, $72,193 96; 1866, $151,378 10; 1867 (estimated), $155,000. That the expenditures had been: In 1863, $59,731 18; 1864, 59,515 14; 1865, $72,704 78; 1866, $118,952 30; 1867, $175,184 90. That in October, 1866, attention had been attracted to some cracks in the northern wall, alleged to have been caused by the settling of the building, but that defect had been remedied. That on January 1, 1866, G. P. Cummings had been appointed architect, in place of Reuben Clark, who had become sick, and who died subsequently on July 4, 1866. And that on January 18, 1867, the Board had adopted a resolution discontinuing the use of granite for the exterior walls, above the medallion course at the top of the basement story, and had determined to use hard-burned brick, with ornaments of cast iron—the brick to be covered with a substantial coat of mastic and painted. Later, A. A. Bennett succeeded Cummings as architect.

On January 10, 1868, Francis Giltner offered a resolution in the Assembly to instruct the Committee on Public Buildings to examine the condition of the Capitol building, its manner of construction, the expenditure, and the probable cost for its completion, the probable cost to secure it against overflow from the Sacramento and American Rivers, and the cost of grading the grounds, and of ventilation and lighting. An amendment, by A. Comte, Jr., was adopted—forty-two to thirty-two—directing the committee to examine into the condition and progress of the building, and the manner in which the materials had been procured. The resolution was further amended in the Senate, and, finally, a substitute resolution was adopted by both Houses. On March twenty-first the committee submitted a lengthy report.

On January 23, 1868, Giltner introduced a bill in the Assembly to provide for the removal of the seat of government to San José after the adjournment of the Legislature. That city was to furnish, free of charge, for six years, an appropriate Capitol building, by which time it was expected that the building to be erected by the State would be completed. The bill came up on March third as a special order, together with other removal bills, and the whole matter was laid on the table, by a vote of thirty-four to nineteen. Afterward the bills were taken from the table, and on the twenty-first were indefinitely postponed by a vote of forty-four to twenty.

On January 30, 1868, E. C. Tully introduced a bill in the Assembly, the preamble of which recited that "the completion of the Capitol building in Sacramento, the grading of the grounds and streets, the ornamenting and fencing of the same, will cost the State several hundred thousand dollars; and the location of the Capital is a question of continued agitation by the Legislature; and serious doubts exist in the minds of a large portion of the people throughout the State as to the safety of Sacramento from floods; and that the people of the State are heavily burdened with taxation." The bill provided that whenever the local authorities of San Francisco, San José, Oakland, or Benicia should notify the Governor that they would erect a Capitol building to cost not less than $400,000, on a suitable lot within the corporate limits of the city they represented, and that they would deed the lot and building to the State before December 1, 1869, then all further work on the Sacramento building should cease. Upon the receipt of the deed and the possession of the building being given, the Governor should issue a proclamation declaring the city so deeding the property to be the seat of government, and, as soon thereafter as practicable, the State officers should remove to the city designated, with the official archives and public property.

On February twenty-first W. Z. Angney introduced a bill in the Assembly, the preamble to which was similar to that of Tully's bill, except that it stated in addition that serious doubts existed as to whether San José was not the constitutional seat of government. The bill provided for the appointment of a Board of Capitol Commissioners, to be composed of certain State officers, who were to meet at San José and select a site for the Capitol building in that city. They were to adopt plans for the building, and the local authorities were to erect a building before October 1, 1869, in accordance with the plans, and transfer the building and grounds to the State free of charge, when the seat of government was to be removed to that city. Both of these bills were lost with the Giltner bill.

On February 4, 1868, a communication was presented to the Assembly from the Dashaway Club of Santa Cruz offering the use of their hall for ten years as a State Capitol, provided the seat of government should be removed to that place. A similar communication was received by the Senate, but no action was taken on the matter by either house.

On the seventh, the authorities of San José and Santa Clara County formally tendered the members of the Legislature and their friends a free special train on which to visit San José. The Council of that city, by resolution, offered to donate to the State any one of their public parks as a site for the Capitol, and the Board of Supervisors of Santa Clara County tendered the free use of their Court House for five years, until a Capitol building could be built on the square. The invitation to ride was accepted by the Senate but declined by the House. The Senate also took a trip to Oakland by invitation of the officers of that city. A bill was introduced in each House to repeal the Act providing for the special tax for the construction of the Capitol, but they failed of passage.

On the evening of November 25, 1869, the gas in the legislative chambers, and in the new Capitol building generally, was lighted for the first time. The offices of the Governor and the Secretary of State in the new building were opened for the transaction of business the next morning. The Supreme Court met there for the first time December third. The formal taking possession of the building by the Legislature on December sixth was commemorated by the firing of a salute and a general display of flags in Sacramento. On the fifteenth, a grand ball was given in the Capitol in honor of its occupation. In his annual message of December 8, 1869, Governor Haight estimated that it would require $381,280 to complete the building in accordance with the plans, which, added to the expenditures which had been made, would make the total cost of the building $1,447,377 04. On March 29, 1870, an Act was approved declaring the Board of Capitol Commissioners, created by the Act of March 29, 1860, to be constituted of the Governor, Secretary of State, and Treasurer. Another Act was approved on April 4, 1870, authorizing the issuance of seven per cent, fifteen year bonds, to the amount of $250,000, for the purpose of providing for the payment for work to be done and material to be furnished on the Capitol building and grounds after June 1, 1870, and the Commissioners were authorized to expend from the money realized from the sale of the bonds not exceeding $50,000 for the purchase of suitable grounds and the erection of a mansion for the Governor. When the bonds matured on July 1, 1885, the State Treasurer reported that all but about $14,000 of them belonged to the State School Fund, and consequently very little money left the Treasury vault on that account. Under this bill the Commissioners, on August 19, 1870, decided to purchase a block of land in Sacramento, to the east of the Capitol grounds, for a site for the mansion, at an expense of $14,000. In that month work was commenced on the mansion, and it was prosecuted until the appropriation became exhausted. The building remained in an incomplete condition for several years, when finally an Act was passed to fit it up for the State Printing Office, and it has since been used for that purpose.

On March 28, 1872, an Act was approved authorizing the issuance of State bonds to the amount of $250,000, the proceeds from the sale of which were to be applied in paying for the construction of the Capitol after June 1, 1872. On the 1st of April following a law was passed authorizing the Capitol Commissioners to condemn five blocks of land in Sacramento City between L and N and Twelfth and Fifteenth streets, and to cause the same to be enclosed with the Capitol grounds and the block on which the Governor's mansion was being built. The Commissioners were authorized to have the land suitably graded and planted in ornamental trees and shrubbery. The sum of $100,000 was appropriated for the purchase of the land. Under this Act the Sixth District Court appointed E. Black Ryan, E. Cadwalader, and W. C. Felch, on October nineteenth, to ascertain the compensation that should be made to the owners of the property. On February 6, 1873, they reported and assessed the value of the land and improvements at $142,423 40. The State officers declined to make the purchase, as the appraisement was in excess of the appropriation. Finally a few citizens of Sacramento assumed to pay to the property-owners the excess over $100,000 and the amount for which the improvements would sell, and the purchase was made by the State. On March 7, 1874, the Legislature passed an Act authorizing the authorities of Sacramento city to submit to a vote of the people of that city the question of levying a special tax of 20 cents on the $100 for the purpose of raising $29,883 70 to reimburse the parties who had advanced the money over and above the State appropriation. At a special election held March 10, 1874, the people of Sacramento, by a vote of two thousand two hundred and ninety-three to five hundred and seventy-three, decided to levy the tax upon themselves. Subsequently the Legislature has made appropriations for the building of a first class stone and iron fence and for the laying of a concrete sidewalk around the grounds.

The entire amount expended by the State for grounds, and for the construction of the present Capitol, as shown by the reports of the Controller, is $2,590,460 19. The present Constitution provides in section one of article twenty:

The City of Sacramento is hereby declared to be the seat of government of this State, and shall so remain until changed by law; but no law changing the seat of government shall be valid or binding unless the same be approved and ratified by a majority of the qualified electors of the State voting therefor at a general State election, under such regulations and provisions as the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of each House, may provide, submitting the question of change to the people.

DISCOVERY OF GOLD.

The first mention of gold in California was made in Hakluyt's account of the voyage of Sir Francis Drake, who spent five or six weeks, in June and July, 1579, in a bay on the coast of California. It has always been a question and will remain a question, whether this bay was that of San Francisco or one further to the north. In the narrative of Hakluyt it is written: "There is no part of the earth here to be taken up wherein there is not a reasonable quantity of gold or silver." At this day we know that this statement must have been untrue, and was doubtless written for the purpose of attracting attention to the importance of the expedition of Sir Francis Drake. California was then a comparatively unknown country. It had been visited only by early explorers, and its characteristics were merely conjectural. When Hakluyt wrote there could hardly be a "handful of soil taken up wherein there is not a reasonable quantity of gold or silver," in the light of the present the statement was absurd, for neither gold nor silver has ever been found in the vicinity of the point where Drake must have landed.

Other early explorers stated that gold had been found long before the discovery by Marshall; and there is no doubt that a well founded surmise prevailed that gold existed in California. The country had been explored at times since the sixteenth century, by Spanish, Russian, and American parties. It was visited by Commodore Wilkes, who was in the service of the United States on an extensive exploring expedition; and members of his party ascended the Sacramento River and visited Sutter at the fort, while others made explorations by land.

James D. Dana, a celebrated author of several works on mineralogy, was the mineralogist of this expedition and passed by land through the upper portion of California. In one of his works he says that gold rock and veins of quartz were observed by him in 1842 near the Umpqua River, in Southern Oregon; and again, that he found gold near the Sierra Nevada and on the Sacramento River; also, on the San Joaquin River and between those rivers. There is, in the reports of the Fremont exploring expedition, an intimation of the existence of gold.

It has been said that in October and November, 1845, a Mexican was shot at Yerba Buena (San Francisco) on account of having a bag of gold dust, and when dying pointed northward and said, "Legos! Legos!" (yonder), indicating where he had found the gold dust.

It has been claimed, and with a considerable degree of probability, that the Mormons who arrived in San Francisco on the ship "Brooklyn" found gold before the famous discovery at Coloma. The circumstances in connection with this discovery are somewhat romantic. The Mormon people had established themselves at Nauvoo, Illinois, a point where they believed themselves to be beyond the reach of persecution. However, the country there became populated by those not of their faith, and the antagonism against the Mormons resulted finally in bloodshed, and the founder of the Church, Joseph Smith, was shot by a mob and killed. The Mormons then determined to remove farther west, and into a section of country beyond the reach of the Government of the United States. They selected California as their future home. Their land expedition started across the plains, and a ship named the "Brooklyn" carried from the eastern side of the continent a number of the believers. Samuel Brannan, who was prominent in the early history of Sacramento, San Francisco, and the State, was one of their leading men who came with the sea voyagers. When the "Brooklyn" immigrants landed at Yerba Buena (San Francisco) they found that the United States forces had taken possession of California, and that they had landed upon soil possessed by the nation from which they were endeavoring to flee. Couriers were sent overland to intercept the land party, and it is said they found them at the place where Salt Lake City is now located. The overland party determined to locate at that place, although it was then sterile and unpromising. Those who came on the "Brooklyn" dispersed in California, and some of them located at Mormon Island, in Sacramento county; and it is claimed that they found gold long before the discovery at Coloma, but that they kept their discovery a secret. However that may be, it is a fact that mining was prosecuted by them about the time of Marshall's discovery.

At a banquet of the Associated Pioneers of the Territorial days of California, held in the City of New York, on January 18, 1878, Colonel T. B. Thorpe, a veteran of the Mexican War, who had been on the staff of General Zachary Taylor, stated that while he had been employed as a journalist in New Orleans, several years before the discovery of gold at Coloma, a Swede, evidently far gone into consumption, called upon him and represented that he was what in his country was called a "king's orphan;" that he had been educated at a governmental institution on condition that after he had received his education he should travel in foreign lands, observe and record what he had seen, and deposit his records with the Government. He stated that he had visited California, remained several days at Sutter's Fort, enjoying the hospitality of Sutter; that while there he closely examined the surrounding country, and became convinced that it abounded richly in gold. Colonel Thorpe stated that the Swede gave him this opinion in writing. At that banquet General Sutter was present, and Colonel Thorpe called upon him to say whether he had any recollection concerning the Swedish visitor. Sutter replied that he did recollect the visit, which had occurred about thirty-four years before; and he also remembered that the Swede expressed himself regarding the presence of mineral wealth in the neighboring hills; "but," added the General, "I was too much occupied at the time with other concerns to devote any time or attention to it. My crops were ripe, and it was imperative that they should be gathered as quickly as possible, but I do recollect the scientific Swedish gentleman."

The report of the remarks delivered at that banquet were published, and in it is contained a copy of the manuscript to which Colonel Thorpe referred, in which the "king's orphan" wrote: "The Californias are rich in minerals. Gold, silver, lead, oxide of iron, manganese, and copper ore are all met with throughout the country, the precious metals being the most abundant."

There is another account of an early gold discovery, which was published in the "New Age," in San Francisco, the official organ of the Odd Fellows, in September, 1865. It purports to have been an extract written by the Paris correspondent of the London "Star," who wrote that in the City of Paris he visited a private museum, and that its owner exhibited to him a nugget of gold, and stated that twenty-eight years before a poor invalid had presented himself and took out of his tattered coat a block of quartz, and asked the proprietor of the museum if he would purchase it, assuring him that it was full of gold. The stranger said: "I have come to you to apply to the Government to give me a vessel and a crew of one hundred men, and I will promise to return with a cargo of gold." The proprietor of the museum presumed that the man was mad, and gave him a napoleon as a matter of charity, but retained a piece of the quartz. Afterward the quartz was analyzed, and it was proved to contain pure gold. Fifteen years elapsed, and a parcel and a letter were left at his door. The parcel was wrapped in a handkerchief, and was heavy. The letter was worn and almost illegible. On deciphering it, it proved to be the dying statement of the poor traveler, which, through the neglect of the lodging-house keeper where he died after the interview referred to, had never been delivered. The package contained a block of quartz, and the letter was thus worded:

"You alone listened to me; you alone stretched out a helping hand to me. Alas! it was too late! I am dying. I bequeath my secret to you. The country from whence I brought this gold is called California."

The credit, however, for the practical discovery of gold in California is due to James W. Marshall. It is true that a gold mine had been worked in 1841 in the lower part of the State, and that gold from that mine sent to the Philadelphia mint for coinage as early as July, 1843. The mine, however, proved unprofitable and was abandoned. The story of the discovery by Marshall at Coloma, in January, 1848, is confused, and the precise date upon which it was made can perhaps never be settled. Marshall was employed by Captain Sutter, and was in charge of a party of men erecting a sawmill at the present site of Coloma, in El Dorado County. A raceway was dug and the water turned in. In examining the race afterward, Marshall's attention was attracted by a shining object. He picked it up. It was gold. Other particles of the metal were collected, and Marshall came with them to Sutter's Fort and exhibited them to his employer, Sutter. They were tested in a crude way, and Sutter became convinced that the metal was gold. Afterward specimens were sent to Monterey, then the capital of the territory, and exhibited to General R. B. Mason, the Military Governor, and to W. T. Sherman, at that time an obscure officer in the United States Army, but who has since risen to national notoriety. The integrity of the metal was established, the news of the discovery sent forth, the world was electrified, and immigration poured in from every civilized country.

James W. Marshall was born in Hope Township, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, October 8, 1810. On arriving at man's estate he removed to Indiana, afterward to Illinois and Missouri; and arrived in California in 1844. In 1845 he came to Sutter's Fort, and was employed by Captain Sutter. He took an active part in the California Revolution of 1846. After his discovery of gold the Legislature of the State pensioned him for a time. Subsequently he settled on a small piece of land at Coloma, near where he had discovered the gold, and made his living by farming. About five o'clock on the morning of August 10, 1885, he was found dead in his cabin, and was buried near the spot where gold was first found by him. He was never married.
